

A
SKETCH OF THE MATERIALS
FOR A NEW AND COMPLEAT
HISTORY OF CHESHIRE:
WITH SOME SHORT ACCOUNTS
OF THE
CHARACTERISTIC GENIUS AND MANNERS OF ITS INHABITANTS, AND OF SOME
LOCAL CUSTOMS PECULIAR TO THAT COUNTY PALATINE:
IN
A LETTER TO THOMAS FALCONER, ESQ.
OF THE CITY OF CHESTER,
FROM THE LATE DR. GOWER.

The Muse, her native Land to see,
Returns to ENGLAND, over DEE;
Visits STOUT CHESHIRE, and there shews
To HER and HERS, what ENGLAND OWES:
And of the Nymphets sporting there,
In WIRRAL and in DELAMERE. Drayt. Poly-Olb. Pref. to Song xi.

THE THIRD EDITION,
WITH AN ENTIRE NEW PREFACE,
AN ACCOUNT OF FURTHER MATERIALS FOR THIS HISTORY, AND
A PLATE OF HUGH LUPUS'S SWORD OF DIGNITY. W. H. L.

LONDON:

SOLD BY G. NICOL, BOOKSELLER TO HIS MAJESTY, PALL-MALL;
AND TO BE HAD OF MR. BILLINGE, IN LIVERPOOL; MR. HASLEDINE, IN MANCHESTER; AND MR. BROSTER, IN CHESTER. 1792.

SECRET

REPORT OF THE

COMMISSIONER

OF THE

LAND OFFICE

FOR THE YEAR

1900

AND

THE

PROGRESS

OF THE

LAND OFFICE

IN

A N
A D D R E S S
TO THE
P U B L I C,
RELATIVE TO THE PROPOSED
HISTORY OF CHESHIRE.

THE unexpected partiality of many Gentlemen of Cheshire, and of the approving Public, to a little Piece, intitled,—“A Sketch of Materials for a New History of Cheshire,”—has influenced them to express their warm and sanguine wishes, that the anonymous Author of this Piece would perfect and compleat his Plan, by an arrangement of his numerous Materials, into an exact and regular Narrative of History. Too eagerly perhaps imagining, that if a work of this nature could be executed with a spirit, and a precision, in the least equal to those partial ideas, which the Sketch of its Materials has excited; the Historical Description of this County—so singularly distinguished by its peculiar privileges—might be rendered as nationally interesting, as it certainly would be provincially curious and important.

In consequence of these wishes, thus repeatedly conveyed to him from the circle of his friends, the Author begs leave to assure the enquiring and approving Public,—that the utmost exertion of his leisure hours, and of his (he fears inadequate) abilities, shall be faithfully dedicated to these Historical Arrangements. And he sincerely joins issue with them, in his ardent wishes, that his duties as a parent, and as a man, indulged him with a greater command of leisure hours to be applied to this exceedingly laborious, though not unamusing, performance.—But as a continual addition of new Materials will be continually adding, not barely to the size, but to the charge of this Provincial History—already too alarmingly expensive for a single and a private hand,—he finds himself under the unpleasing necessity of submitting the following considerations to the mature and candid reflections of the Public. Since their indulgent patronage, or their professed indifference to these necessary considerations, will finally determine him, either to commit his Historic Researches to the press, or to the silent and careful preservation of some general repository of letters.

Amidst this flux of Materials, it is impossible to form any probable, still less any exact estimate, either of the size, or of the expence of this important undertaking. But, with respect to the former, it is apprehended, that Three Volumes in folio will be barely sufficient to comprise the whole of its interesting particulars; and, with respect to the latter, some opinion may be formed of its very considerable charge, from the multiplicity of its numerous Materials*.—These Materials consist of Records in public offices, of Manuscripts in private or general repositories, and of Drawings and Engravings.

The first article is sufficiently known to be particularly expensive; the second already amounts to at least 400 volumes,—all of which must be compleatly perused, and partially transcribed. And the transcripts of many of them will be attended with an increased expence, from the obscurity of the character in which they are written; as the Author has more than once too sensibly experienced, that the abilities of common amanuenses are by no means equal to the investigation of them.—With regard to the two remaining articles, the Drawings and Engravings; he not only wishes—but certainly means—to decline all such as may be merely ornamental, and to present the Public only with those Engravings, which may be absolutely necessary to explain and to elucidate the Work.—The following concise account of them will convey some ideas of his wishes and intentions.

1st, A General Map of the County; with the Arms of all the Families, digested into an alphabetical series. The number of which already exceeds seven hundred.—2^{dly}, The ancient Seals of all the Corporate Bodies, civil and religious, and of the several Families, as far back as they can be collected from authentic evidences. These already amount to nearly eight hundred; and are intended to be equally disposed in alphabetical, though in distinct, series. But as several Seals occur of the same family, in different periods of time, and under different emblems, all the Seals of each particular family will be arranged chronologically.—3dly, Plans and Views of all our ancient Castles and Religious Houses; some of which were taken, when the edifices existed in a state of perfect and entire preservation.—4thly, Plans and Elevations of our most elegantly pleasing and Gothic Churches.—5thly, The sumptuous Monuments, and curiously Painted Glass, as they existed in the several churches of this county, in the year 1596. These Drawings already exceed two hundred; and an intended continuation of them to the present time will make a considerable addition to their number.—6thly, The Arms and local Curiosities existing in most of our ancient Halls and celebrated Mansions in the year 1587: which, very fortunately for the Public, as well as the preceding article, were preserved by the ingenious labours of Randal Holmes, who made a personal survey, and accurate delineations of them in the periods we have referred to.—7thly, Engravings of those Remains which may be strictly and properly styled Antiquities.—Roman, Saxon, and Danish, Camps and Tumuli; curious Vestiges of any of these Nations; with Delineations of every local and ancient Relic, which may be worthy of the notice and the attention of posterity.

* See an account of this multiplicity in the pamphlet annexed, intitled—“A Sketch of Materials for a New History of Cheshire”—Sold by G. Nicol, Bookseller to His Majesty, Pall-Mall, London; and to be had of Mr. Billinge, in Liverpool; Mr. Hasledine, in Manchester; and Mr. Broster, in Chester.

The PLAN of this intended HISTORY, agreeable to the several Heads of Arrangement.

(1) The Work will naturally be introduced with a general and concise Description of the whole County. In which will be given some interesting Accounts, of the Manners of the Inhabitants, of their Pastimes, their Customs, and their Usages; their Particularities of Dialect and of Adages; together with the Rise and Progress of the several Rivers, the Nature of the Soil, the Products, the Commodities, and Manufactures.—But as the Author by no means intends any regular investigation, either of the History, of Nature, or of Art, his account of these last articles must be rather an outline, than a compleat History.

(2) The Description of the Customs, and Usages, of the Inhabitants of this County, will naturally lead the Author to treat of the very singular Privileges, and the very peculiar Jurisdictions, which they enjoyed under their ancient Earls, or local Monarchs. The particular History of each Earl from the remotest æra, and of each Monarch, will be given; his Alliances and Descents; his Exploits in War, his Treaties, and his Arts of Peace.

(3) The History of these local Monarchs will insensibly carry us to a Description of the Capital of their Monarchy. Which will include an Account, of the Form of Government, of the Jurisdictions, Lists of Magistrates, Variety of Revolutions in different periods of time; the Singularity of its Walls and of its Rows or Piazzas; together with every thing that is curious and important, relative to the most ancient and the most celebrated City of Chester.

(4) From the Description of the capital City, the transition will be easy to the History of the County at large. This will be arranged under the several Hundreds in an alphabetical series; and the disposition of the parishes in every Hundred will be equally alphabetical.—Under each Parish will be comprehended the several Townships or Villages, the Lordships, and inferior Manors;—the Etymology of their Names;—the Possessors of them as far back as they can be ascertained;—their Pedigrees and Descents—their Mansions and Places of Habitation—with every local circumstance, either ancient or modern, which may be worthy of recording, and of transmitting to posterity. And, to render the Narrative of these particulars as pleasing, and as interesting, as the nature of these subjects can possibly admit of, the Author intends to dispose his Pedigrees into genealogical tables; and to collect all his Authorities of Original Charters, and other authentic documents, either into an Appendix to each Hundred, or to its particular Head of Arrangement.

(5) Hitherto we have omitted to treat of that branch of our Provincial History, which may be properly styled—Antiquities. Under this Head of Arrangement then, will be given a regular deduction of all our Antiquarian Remains from the British, Saxon, Danish, and Norman, periods—Their Camps, Barrows, Sepulchral Inscriptions, Coins, Relics, Castles, and Religious Houses.

(6) The Account of these sacred Remains will naturally lead us to the Religious History of this County. In which the earliest period will, if possibly, be ascertained, when it became enlightened with the rays of divine truth—the first Foundation of its Episcopal Government—and the Restoration of it under Henry the Eighth;—with some short Account of its Right Reverend Prelates, and of the most distinguished of its Dignitaries.—The discussion of these subjects will carry

carry us almost insensibly to the History of its venerable Cathedral; and to a particular Description of all the sacred Edifices, or Parochial Churches, digested into an alphabetical series.—This Description will comprehend—the Saint each Church is dedicated to: the annual Wake, or Feast of Dedication; the festal Anniversaries, which commonly pass under the name of Rush-gatherings; the Æra of the Building; the Form of the Structure; the Monumental Inscriptions; the Fenestral and Monumental Delineations; the List of Incumbents as far back as they can be recovered; the List of Patrons; the several charitable Donations; the Value of, and Deductions from, the Benefice; the Quantity of Glebe Land, and particularities of Modes of Tything; with every other memorable and interesting circumstance, which may be strictly and purely Ecclesiastical.

(7) The last general Head of Arrangement will be the several Lists of those Provincial Officers, and Magistrates, which have always been thought too necessary an appendage of such a Work as this, to be capable of omission—The Lord Lieutenants, the Custodes Rotulorum, Chief Justices of Chester, Chamberlains, High Sheriffs, and Representatives in Parliament since our imperfect union with the Legislative and Constitutional Body of this Kingdom under Henry the Eighth.

Such is the concise Plan of this intended History. And the Author here must acknowledge his being perfectly sensible, that his Plan is entirely different from that of any other Provincial History. But he flatters himself, that his reasons for this difference will so far reconcile it to the public judgment, as to make it appear rather an optionable, and an useful, than an affected singularity. All our Provincial Accounts hitherto published are, without exception, rather a kind of Antiquarian Dictionaries to be consulted occasionally, than any regular and engaging Narratives to be perused with pleasure. The reader's attention is continually interrupted by a continual change of subject. And it is no wonder, that he should be neither enlivened, nor entertained, with the Narration,—when an unpleasing assemblage of incoherent, and inconsistent topics, obliges even the Narrator to consider himself, rather as a mere Compiler, than as an enterprising and entertaining Historian. But surely, in a Work of this nature, it is not absolutely ideal to attempt an intermixture of the Utile with the Dulci. The reader may be

be entertained, at the same time that he is informed. And the writer's genius may be more awakened, and his abilities more exerted, to execute the work with spirit, and with precision, when his whole attention is entirely collected, and devoted, to one single and invariable subject.

Such was the Address which the learned Dr. Foote Gower offered, to the Public, so long ago as the year 1772;—and such was the Plan which he had nearly completed, when death put an end to his labours, and deprived him of the honour, and his country, at least for a time, of the advantage which would have been derived from them.—That advantage, however, will now no longer be delayed, if the nobility and gentry of Cheshire in particular, and the lovers of British Antiquities in general, think proper to renew their encouragement for the publication of the proposed History of the County Palatine of Chester.

I am not only in possession of all the Materials of the late Dr. Gower, but have myself made very considerable additions to them;—and I doubt not, but they will together form a very valuable accession to the Natural and Topographical History of my country.

J. WILKINSON, M. D. F. R. S.

Woodford, Essex,

June 7, 1792.

The following were the original Proposals and Plan offered to the Public by Dr. Gower.

T H E
H I S T O R Y
O F
The County Palatine of CHESTER,
IN THREE VOLUMES FOLIO,
By the late FOOTE GOWER, M.D.

C O N D I T I O N S.

- I. THE Work shall be neatly printed, and each Volume shall be embellished with at least Twenty Folio Copper Plates.
- II. The Charge of this expensive Undertaking is estimated at 4,000 Guineas.—The Expence therefore to each Subscriber will be Ten Guineas. Half to be paid at the time of subscribing, and Half on the delivery of the First Volume.
- III. Should the Author die before the Publication of the First Volume, the subscribing Money shall be returned.—And should he die after this Publication, but before the delivery of the succeeding Volumes, he then engages that the Work shall be compleated and published at the Expence of his Executors. Or if more agreeable to any Subscriber, the last Payment of Five Guineas shall be returned.
- IV. To enable his Executors to preserve this Engagement inviolably with the Public, he has already arranged and digested those Materials, of which the Second and Third Volumes are to consist. And with the First Volume shall be delivered a Promissory Note, stipulating either for the Publication of the succeeding Volumes, or the return of the last Five Guineas.
- V. The First Volume shall be sent to the Press in the course of the year 1775, and shall be delivered to the Subscribers as soon as printed, and the Plates are worked off.—The succeeding Volumes shall follow with the utmost dispatch.
- VI. Should the Subscription exceed 4,000 Guineas, the Author will proportionably increase the Expence and Embellishments of his History, in point of Drawings and Engravings.
- VII. After the Subscription is closed, the Price of each Volume shall be considerably raised to the Non-subscribers.

VIII.

VIII. Subscriptions are taken in, and Receipts delivered at G. Nicol's, Bookseller to his Majesty, Pall-Mall, London; at Mr. Billinge's, in Liverpool; at Mr. Hasledine's, in Manchester; and at Mr. Broster's, in Chester.

AN ABSTRACT OF THE PLAN OF THE WORK, AND THE CONTENTS OF EACH VOLUME.

VOL. I. A GENERAL INTRODUCTION relative to the County at large, its Products, Manufactures, Usages, and Customs. Its earliest State—Erection into a County Palatine—History of the Seven Earls, or local Monarchs, their Barons and chief Officers—with a distinct and enlarged Narrative of the City of Chester, the Capital of this Provincial Monarchy.—The Copper Plates will contain a general Map of the County, the several Gentlemen's Coats of Arms, the Effigies of the Seven Earls from ancient Paintings, Perspective Views of some public Edifices in Chester.

VOL. II.—The Civil History of the County digested under the several Hundreds—The Parishes in each—Townships—Antiquities—local Curiosities—Succession of the Lords of the Soil—their Descents—and ancient Mansions.—The Copper Plates will contain several Classes of ancient Seals; Views of Norman Castles; the Saxon or Danish Cross at Sandbach; with other remarkable Antiquarian Remains.

VOL. III.—The Ecclesiastical History of the County—describing the Religious Houses—Bishoprick—Bishops—Cathedral—Churches—Patrons and Incumbents—ancient Painted Glass—remarkable Monuments—Tables of charitable Benefactions—and mutual Rights both of the Parish and the Benefice.—The Copper Plates will represent Remains of Religious Houses; the Cathedral; distinguished Churches; remarkable Monuments; and curious Vestiges of Painted Glass.

N. B. For a more particular Account of the Plan and Contents, read a printed Sheet, intitled—An Address to the Public relative to the proposed History of Cheshire.—And for the voluminous Materials from which this History is to be compiled, see a Pamphlet, intitled—A Sketch of the Materials for a compleat History of Cheshire; Third Edition. Both of which may be had at the above Booksellers.

A
Sketch of the MATERIALS
FOR A
HISTORY OF CHESHIRE,
IN

A Letter to THOMAS FALCONER, Esq.

DEAR SIR,

THOUGH the common occurrences of life have dissolved that pleasing tie which subsisted between us at Oxford; and placed us, not---longo proximi intervallo---but as far asunder as East and West; yet, I am always happy in every opportunity of reviving this tender intercourse, and conversing with you upon paper, even at the distance that accident has placed us.

But sure, my good friend, you are not perfectly serious in that flattering expression of your favourite wishes ---
“that my leading passion for our National Antiquities, and
“the pains I am supposed to have exerted in the pursuit of “them, might all at last center in one point, and be entirely “dedicated to a HISTORY OF CHESHIRE.” For no one knows, or at least ought to know, better than yourself, how much of the midnight oil must necessarily be wasted in this laborious service; and the great demand so extensive an undertaking is likely to make upon me, both in point of Constitution and of Fortune. Cheshire, to its proper Historian, I will be bold to say, is the first and most important county in the whole kingdom of Great Britain. Its original and peculiar privilege of having been for many centuries a monarchy of itself---a complete imperium in imperio ¹ --- has preserved in the public Repository of its Castle more traces and memorials of its ancient Records, than any other Provincial District can boast of. Add to this, the history of her Barons bold---

The mightiest men of Bone, in her full bosom bred,

--- as Drayton so poetically calls them ; and in whose bosom they have flourished from Father to Son² for such a length of ages ; and you will easily conceive the almost immensity of matter that offers itself to a Cheshire Historian.

But if Glory and Honour, as you sensibly observe, still bear their full proportion to every noble and every arduous task ;

¹ I have given you Hugh Lupus's Charter under the collections of Henry Bradshaw.

² Camden says, that Cheshire always produced more gentry than any other county in the Kingdom. For there was no part of England that formerly supplied the king's army with more nobility ; or that could number more knights families. And old Speed calls it the Seed-Plot of gentility.

task; here is certainly sufficient Palm to excite the honest labours, if not to raise the Enthusiasm of any future historian of this distinguished County. And with the view of kindling up one spark at least of this Enthusiastic Flame, I shall beg your indulgence, in the short compass of this letter, to chalk out some imperfect Sketch of the vast Materials still existing towards a History of Cheshire. --- Good Sense itself, with a thorough knowledge of the subject, will easily direct the application of these materials; and then it must be left to the native generosity of the Gentlemen of this County, whether their nurturing bounty will in future encourage any ingenious person to arrange these materials, and by registering the acts of their great Progenitors, to rescue these perishing Records from oblivion. --- For my own part it will be sufficient praise, if I endeavour to wreath an Honorary Chaplet that may adorn the Brows of their chosen Historian, without presuming to the vanity of placing it on my own.

As the Dictates, however, of Reason are sterling in any kind of language; or, as Pope once said to the Tully of the age, since---

Plain Truth, dear Murray, needs no Flowers of speech;

---So take, my dear friend, the essence of this whole argument in the homely phrase of Daniel King. --- "That " there is no County in England more famous for a long
" suc-

“succession of ancient gentry, than this of Cheshire, will “not be denied; nor for setting forth their descents, and “memorable employments; in as much as the substance of “all publique records for almost four hundred years are “carefully preserved in the Castle at Chester; and that the “private evidences concerning the particular families of that “County, are, by reason of their long duration,¹ less dispers’d
 “than those of many others, through the great and frequent “changes that have befallen them in most places. --- It is “therefore to be hoped, that the worthiness of the subject
 “will stir up such, whose greater abilities may, by a more “exact survey and search into the antiquities of this shire,
 “contribute farther to its honour, by restoring to light “its ancient glory, for the more ample content of all per- “sons concerned therein, and their own lasting memory.”

This sensible Extract from Daniel King, is the substance of his Preface to what, He is pleas’d to call --- The Vale
Royal of England.² But had the comic powers of that easy poet, Gay, thought proper to have given it a name; he would

¹ The great Selden in his notes upon Drayton’s Poly-Olbion, has this remark
 —“Generally in these northern parts of England, the gentry is from ancient time “left preserved in continuance of name, blood, and place; and most particularly so in “Cheshire, &c.

² The only general account of Cheshire we yet have.

would most probably have affixed to it the humourous title of the ---*What D'ye call it of Cheshire.*¹ Since King's Work, as it stands at present, is neither simply a History nor simply Collections; but a farrago of valuable materials thrown together in so much disorder, that we may candidly speak of it, as Milton does of the tower of Babel,

—— Thus was the fabric left
Ridiculous; and the work Confusion named.

But, upon this head, the ingenious author of the ---Anecdotes of British Topography --- has expressed himself with so much propriety, that I cannot forbear giving you his sentiments. Speaking of Burton's History of Leicestershire, he proceeds thus: --- “The next county-survey after Burton's “was that of Cheshire, 1656; indigested, indeed, and incom- “plete; but such as, like those of many other counties, we “must be content with, till some native Antiquary rises up “to enlarge and new model it.”²

Now, after what we have been told by King himself of the --- Worthiness of the subject; the further Contribution to its honour; and the Restoration to light of its ancient glory;

¹ Mr. Gay has a Tragi-comi-pastoral Farce by this title.

² Preface to the Anecdotes of Br. Topogr. page viii.

can we conceive so ignobly of the great English blood of Cheshire chief of men,¹ as to suppose them either indifferent or inattentive to such a future History of their County, as may in some measure be equal to the Grandeur of the Design, and to the illustrious subject of which it treats?

Sentiments, such as these, would be entirely inconsistent with that native provincial generosity which I have this instant taken the liberty to hint to you. And when I speak, my dear friend, of the native generosity of the Gentlemen of Cheshire, I am authorised by modern facts, as well as by the truth of history. But this generous turn of sentiment has always been rendered more eminently conspicuous, by having been particularly directed to that point of conduct, which seemed most likely to promote the peculiar Honour, and the distinguished Character of this County. Of this nature, certainly, was their celebrated Hospitality of yore: Which was really so diffusively extensive, as not only still to live in Poetic Song, but in the relations of graver Writers. I shall presently give you instances from both. But I must first of all conclude this remark, by observing, that the modern sons

1 — The noblest Cestrian shore,
Of our Great English Bloods as careful here of yore,
As Cambria of her Brutes; now is, or could be then.
For which our Proverb calls her, Cheshire Chief of Men.

Drayton's Poly-Olb. Song 11. line. 5.

of

of Cheshire are not any ways degenerated from the spirit of their Fore-fathers, in the Provincial Character of Generosity---If the English Roast Beef, and the Beverage of our Ancestors, retain at this day any part of their former distinction, except in rhyme and metre, it is undoubtedly upon what old Drayton calls --- “The Cestrian Shore.” And the Peers themselves, those national inheritors of Honour, have not shewn more attention to the methodising, and illustrating of their Journals,¹ than the present Gentlemen of Cheshire have exerted in the Preservation of their County Records. With this noble view, they have fitted up a Suite of Rooms in the Castle of Chester, I won’t barely say with every Degree of Convenience, but with every Degree of Elegance. And if the great design is still incomplete, it is owing to the want of a proper candidate for that generous Reward, which they have publicly offered for the Regular Classing of their Provincial Muniments.

Let me now give you instances, both from Poetic and from Prosaic Story, of the ancient Hospitality of Cheshire. --- The muse, in Drayton’s Poly-Olbion, speaking of our

¹ The house of Peers are at present so attentive to this important subject, as to have appropriated a particular Fund for the noble purposes of arranging their Records. And out of this Fund, the late Mr. Morant of Colchester in Essex, a Jersey Man, had a munificent salary for Explaining those Journals which were written in old French, wars in France, thus celebrates the Prowess of the Men of Cheshire, by saying that they had

—— “Livelihood of their Own, their Ages to Sustaine; “Nor did the Tenants Pay the Landlord's Charge maintain;
 “But as abroad in Warre, He spent of his Estate;
 “Returning to his Home, his Hospitable Gate
 “The Richer and the Poore stood open to receive ——
 “They, of all England most, to ancient Customs cleave.”

And Fuller, in his English Worthies,¹ confirms this pleasing account of the Hospitable Gate, in telling us,---“That “the Cheshire Gentry are remarkable for four Things;
 “their Numbers, not to be paralleled in England in the “like extent of ground; their Antiquity, their Loyalty, and “their Hospitality; no County keeping better Houses,
 “which, because all grows on their own, may be the better
 “afforded. --- This truth has given rise to a pleasant ob“servation; that it appeared to all people that the Cheshire “Gentry were good House-keepers, because they gave so “many Wheat-sheaves in their Coats of Arms; Bread being
 “the Staff of Hospitality, and Wheat the Best of all “Bread. Indeed I myself have reckoned no fewer than

¹ Pages 171, 187.

“ six and twenty’ Wheat-Sheaves, called Garbs in Heraldry, “ which are borne in the several Coat-Armours of the Gen- “ try of this County” --- And he takes his farewell of Cheshire, by earnestly wishing --- “ That some of their Hospi- “ tality were planted in the South, that it might bring forth
 “ Fruit therein.”

Now, whether the pleasant reason of this bearing in their Arms, mentioned by Fuller, may be the true one, or the reverse;² it certainly strikes us with the agreeable appearance of an ingenious Probability. And as the highest instance of Cheshire Hospitality, he might have carried on the Allusion, by telling us; that these garbs, or Wheat Sheaves, are borne by the City of Chester, as well as by the County Palatine itself.

² Our Author might have reckoned many more. Take the following cursory list,

Birkenhead,	Eden,	Maxfield,	Styche,
Brerewood,	Fitton,	Merebury,	Tilston,
Cholmondeley,	Grosvenor,	Mylneton,	Vernon,
Colwich,	Hatton,	Oldfield,	Weever,
Cowper,	Holdesheafe	Preston,	Weaver,
Cradock,	Kemp,	Raincourt,	Wheat,
Darby,	King,	Read,	Whitley,
Dedwood.	Langton,	Rutter,	Wickited,
Dodd,	Leftwich,	Sandbach	Wirrall,
Doleman,	Masterfon,	Skellerne,

² Kent's Grammar of Heraldry has this Observation under the family name of Raincourt — “ The Bearing of Garbs, denotes a Person given to Hospitality and charitable to the Poor.”

D

But

But as local Customs, of long standing, give us the clearest insight into the Manners and the Genius of a People--- I cannot avoid reminding you, upon the present occasion, that *Frumenty*¹ makes the principal entertainment of all our Country-Wakes, and that no Festal-Anniversary can possibly be celebrated amongst the Inhabitants of Cheshire; unless, the Staff of Hospitality, as Fuller calls it, crowns the Social and the Festal Board.

The above passage from Fuller, puts me in mind of a similar remark of the sensible Verstegan, in his "Restitution of decay'd Intelligence in Antiquities." The Modern names of Lord and Lady, he says, are only polished contractions from the Saxon titles of Hlaford and Hleafdien. And he is certainly so far right, that whatever words are at this time strictly and purely English, are undoubtedly nothing more than the old Saxon ones modernized, by smoothing away and polishing the roughness.---Your inquisitive turn of mind has, I'm sure, given you an insight into this language of our ancestors; or, I should have informed you from this author, that Hlaf means bread, and dien means to serve or distribute it. The sense of Hlaf, you know, we still partly retain in the word loaf; of which the Saxon term term was most certainly the parent.--- A Hlaf-ford therefore, or a lord, amongst our ancestors was, one, who was the provider of Ceres, or the afforder of the staff of life. And the amiable title of Hleaf-dien was applied to the Partner of his joys and cares, as being the distributor of her husband's bounty.---Whether the present refinements of life permit any part of the character of the Saxon Hlaf-ford to exist in the modern Lord'---“ out of the bounds of Wirrall, “ and of Delamere”---I shall leave to your own reflections. But the ancient Hleaf-dien so far exists in the modern Lady, that by still presiding at her husband's table, she distributes his bounty to the surrounding guests.

¹ Our common People call it Firmitry---It is an agreeable Composition of boiled Wheat, Milk, Spice and Sugar.

Those, who affectedly ape the supposed refined manners of a rival nation, want to laugh this custom out of countenance. But I own I always glow with an honest indignation, whenever I see the substantial manners, and the sensible customs of our ancestors, so miserably fricassied away as they are, by professedly mimicking the genius of a People so contrary to our own.

Let

1 “ We find that our Nobility, which generally do bear the Name of Lord, “ have always, and as it were of a successive Custom (rightly according unto that “ honourable Name) maintained and fed more People, to wit, of their Servants, “ Retainers, Dependents, Tenants, and also the Poore, than the Nobility of “ any country in the Continent, which surely is a Thing very honourable and lau“ dable, and most well befitting Noblemen and right noble Minds.

Let us now, my dear Friend, leave this scene of Cheshire Hospitality---where the Hlaford and the Hleafdien still flourish as of yore---in order to celebrate those, her Literary sons, who have reflected honour upon their native soil, by endeavouring to preserve any memorials of her ancient glory. Amongst these, I shall not presume to rank the collectors of her public Records within the Castle of Chester; because whatever care and pains they may have exerted, has been purely Official. I shall only say in general, that if those public Repositories of the Tower of London, the Rolls Chapel, and the Office of the Exchequer, are of the least consequence to the kingdom at large; the Castle of Chester is of the same and equal importance to this our County Palatine. But there is one public Record, formerly preserved in this Repository, of much too useful and grand a Nature to be pass'd over in silence.---You are perfectly acquainted with the Survey, which William the Conqueror ordered to be taken of all England; and which went under the Name of Domes-day Book, because it was a recorded Evidence of Judgement in all possible Cases of disputed Property. Dom, or, as we now write it, Doom, being the Saxon Word for Judgement.---But besides this general Survey, which related to all England,¹ and to Cheshire in common with the other Counties,

¹ Though Domesday Book is generally supposed a Survey of all England, yet the four northern counties are not comprehended in the Original Survey now remaining

Counties, there was a Domes-day Book peculiar only to our Palatinate ; and which undoubtedly took its Rise from this sensible Institution of the Norman Conqueror. Our great Antiquary, Sir Peter Leycester, frequently mentions this Cheshire Domes-day in his History of Bucklow Hundred ; and he not only gives us some extracts from its Contents, but in several places he thus particularly describes it --- “ There “ was a Domes-day Book in our Exchequer at Chester formerly, wherein many Deeds and Records were enrolled ;
 “ but this Book of Record is now lost.” And again --- “ In “ the Roll of the Ancient Chartes, called Domes-day, anciently remaining among the Records at Chester, but now lost, and taken away, it was found --- Leuca quæ fuit uxor,
 “ &c.”¹

But, with the leave of our great Antiquary, this invaluable Record, or at least a Record which ascertains the lineal maining in the Exchequer. The Saxon Chronicle however says,—“ tenuit Rex “ magnum Concilium, et mittebat servos suos per totam Anglorum Terram, “ scrutari, quot Hydarum essent in singulis Comitatus, quidque Rex ipse haberet,

 “ et quantum Census annui.” Chron. Sax. p. 186.—And all the writers of that age speak of this survey as extending over the whole kingdom ; though later ones imagine, that the four northern counties had suffered so much by the ravages of war, that the king’s commissioners found it impossible to take any exact survey of those provinces.

¹ Pages 220, lin. penult.—317, lin. 6.

and uninterrupted succession of almost every single acre of Cheshire Property for at least five hundred years, is now in my possession. I should be sorry to suppose it the stolen and the precious casket of Ancient Charts, which Sir Peter tells us was taken away. But I own my heart leaps with a provincial Joy, when I reflect that accident has put it in my power to oblige my Countrymen with this Opus Aureum, this Golden Record; so infinitely superior to any Record now existing, either in the Archives or in the Annals of any other County in Great Britain. And if Parliament has thought it an object worthy of National Wisdom, to print the original Domes-day Book at the expence of the Public, which relates only to one single period of time¹—it is scarcely to be imagined, that the generous good sense, for which our County has been remarkable, would be inattentive to the public preservation of this invaluable Record; which faithfully registers the succession, not only of their Property, but of their Progenitors for such a length of Centuries.

But it is not only in the sensible Institution of Domes-day Book, that this our inferior Monarchy of Cheshire hath imitated the noble Example of its Paramount, and Parent-Empire. For if the latter had still another valuable Record, from the colour of its Cover, and the place of its Preservation, called the *Red Book of the Exchequer*¹; our Empire of Cheshire had equally its valuable Record, under the denomination of the Red Book. The Antiquity of this original Record is very great. It was once the possession of the Abbey of St. Werburgh's in Chester; is written upon parchment; and contains the Evidences of their Endowments, Copies of legal Proceedings out of Plea Rolls, their several transactions, and other authentic notices concerning this venerable Monastery. It is now very carefully preserved in the Archives of the Dean and Chapter.

¹ The wisdom of parliament, a sessions or two ago, assigned 2000l. of the national money for the publication of Domes-day Book. And if this noble design is still unexecuted, it is owing to some difficulties in ascertaining the best mode of publication. The Cheshire Domes-day, if I may so call it, now in my possession, consists of two folio volumes, in a very small close hand.

Partly coeval with this Record, is a remarkable Manuscript, frequently quoted under the Title of Annales Cestrienses, or the Chester Annals. The Author of this Manuscript is unknown. It consists of Annals from the Birth of Christ to the Year 1255; and particularly recites many

“ There is also in the Keeping of the King's Remembrancer, an ancient Miscellany of several notable Treatises; which volume is commonly cited and called by the name of Liber ruber Scaccarii, or, the Red Book of the Exchequer. The Collector of the treatises in this book, is reasonably thought by Mr. Madox, to have been Alexander de Swereford, Archdeacon of Shrewsbury, and an officer in the Exchequer in the latter end of the reign of Henry the Second.”

Bp. Nicholson's Hist. Libr. edit. 1714, p. 213.

Historical

Historical Circumstances relative to Chester, with the renowned Acts of its Great Monarch, the famous Earl Randal.

This Monarch, Randal the Third, surnamed *Blundeville*¹, you, my dear Friend, perfectly know, was as celebrated in his time, as any of the Seven Champions of Christendom. And what is more, the famed story of his Atchievements, is as much founded in Truth, as that of the others is in Fable.--- Robert Sangland, or John Malverne-- for the Author is uncertain-- gives us a pointed Instance in what manner this mighty Earl was made the principal Hero of the Rhimes of those Days. He introduces an ignorant Monk attempting to chant Mass, and giving this excuse for his utter inability ;

“ I can not the Pater Noster, as the Priest it singeth ;

“ But I can Rimes of Robin Hood, and Randal of Chester.

“ But of our Lord and our Lady I lerne nothing at all.

Next to the Chester Annals, in point of Time, is a History of the Earldom of Chester, collected by Archbishop Parker ;² and deposited with his other Literary Treasures in Bennet College Library. The Title of it is--“ de Successione Comitum Cestriae, a Hugone Lupo ad Johannem Scoticum.” And it is so far faithful to its Title, as to contain the History and Atchievements of our Seven Cestrian Monarchs. Of this whole number how pleasing is it to reflect, that, agreeable to the genius and the manners of those Times, they were all of them patterns of Military Prowess ! And in respect of Acts of real Munificence, every single Monarch atchieved---“ Imperial Works and worthy Kings.”---The great Selden quotes this manuscript in his Titles of Honour, under the character of the old History of the Earldom of Chester.¹

¹ He was the Sixth Earl, or Monarch of Chester.

² Mathew Parker was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury Dec. 17, 1559.

If we are obliged however to the venerable Abbey of St. Werburgh's for the Red Book ; we are equally indebted to it for a learned Member of that Society, by the name of HENRY BRADSHAW. A sense of Gratitude to the Charitable Institution that gave him bread, produced a Poem in Honour of the tutelary Saint, to whom his Abbey was dedicated. Webb, in King's Vale-Royal, quotes ten stanzas of his Verses, and calls him---“ our best Antiquary”.² And Fuller, in his Worthies of England, gives us the following account of him---“ Henry Bradshaw was born in the City “ of Chester, and lived therein a Benedictine. He was a “ diligent Historian ; having written no bad Chronicle, and

¹ Page 729.

² Part 2d. page 25, line 16, and pages 9, 11, 25, 31, 32.

“ another Book, of the Life of St. Werburgh. He flourished about the year 1513.”

The Chronicle, my dear Friend, referred to by Fuller, has this Title--De Antiquitate et Magnificentia Urbis Cestriae; of the Antiquity and Magnificence of the City of Chester.--- But I must not conceal my doubts from you, that this Chronicle of Bradshaw's, and his Life of St. Werburgh, are in reality one and the same Work. John Pits, in his account of this Writer, tells us---“ that he is apt to believe his former labours were all swallowed up by another Work, “ His Life of St. Werburgh, which is still to be found in “ several of our Libraries².” And it something remarkable, that if these two were distinct Works, neither Leland nor Webb should quote his Chronicle, though so expressly to their purpose ; whereas each of them gives us large Extracts from his Life of St. Werburgh.³ The one of these Writers too was the Cotemporary of Bradshaw ; the other his Fellow Citizen, and of the same Century.---But whether these writings are the same, or distinct, Works ; can your Historic Enquiries inform me---where these manuscripts, “ still remaining in several of our Libraries,” are in this age to be discovered

¹ Page 290.

² Pits de Angl. Scriptor. page 690.

³ King ut Supra.—Leland Collectan. Vol. iii. page 58.

discovered? For it is most certain, they are neither in the Oxford nor the London Museum; neither do they lie concealed in that Mine of Learning, the Bodleian Library.

The remains of Bradshaw's Religious Asylum might be reasonably supposed to have afforded them a safe protection under its venerable roof; if the library of the Dean and Chapter had not been ineffectually ransacked for this purpose. The ingenious Author of the British Topography hath indeed told us---“That Bradshaw's Life in Verse of “the glorious Virgin St. Werburgh was printed at London “in Quarto 1521¹.” But I fear it was a Life of this glorious Virgin, composed by some inferior Author; and not the famous one in Metre of her grateful Votary, Henry Bradshaw. My Reasons are---that the æra of its publication 1521, is nearly coeval with the very æra of its existence. And besides, this circumstance is not only unknown to all our Writers, but the very inquisitive and very intelligent Bishop Nicholson speaks of it, as still unpublished, in the improved edition of his Historical Library, 1714².

It is however certainly true, that many parts of this celebrated Poem have frequently been transcribed by its fond admirers. And particularly I have in my possession several of the---disjecti Membra Poetæ. He writ in Stanzas of seven verses each; frequently adding a couplet to the stanza, in order to round the period, and to complete the sense. As a sample of his Rhime---accept the Grand Charter of William the Conqueror to his nephew Hugh Lupus; by which he invested him with the Seignory and the Monarchy of Chester. And indulge me a few Observations upon this most extensive Act of Royal Munificence: not that these Observations can inform a mind like your's; but as this celebrated Charter formed the basis of our Exclusive Rights, and constituted the grand Æra of our Cheshire Empire.

THE ROYAL CHARTER OF THE CHESHIRE EMPIRE,

IN OLD ENGLISH METRE.

- " The King gave to him for his Inheritance
- " The County of Chester with its Appurtenance—
- " By Victory to win the aforefaid Earlidome,
- " Freely to govern it as by Conquest-Right;
- " Made a sure Charter to Him and his Succession,
- " By the Sword of Dignity to hold it with Might,
- " And to call a Parliament at his Will and Sight.
- " To order his Subjects after true Justice,
- " As a perpotent Prince, and Statutes to devise.
- " By Virtue of this Grant --- says the Great Antiquary
- " Camden¹ ---Cheshire enjoyed all Sovereign Jurisdiction

¹ Camden's Britannia, vol. i. page 662.

within

“ within its own precincts. And that, in so high a degree,
 “ that the ancient Earls had Parliaments of their own Ba“ rons,¹ and Tenants; and were not obliged by the Engliſh
 “ Acts of Parliament. These high, and otherwise unac-“ countable Jurifdictions, were thought neceſſary upon the “ Marches, and borders of the Kingdom; as inveſting the “ governors of thoſe provinces with Dictatorial Power, and “ enabling them more effectually to ſubdue the common “ enemies of the Nation.”---And agreeable to theſe high powers, when the ſtyle in all legal proceedings of the Courts at Weſtminſter ran, Contra Coronam et Dignitatem Regis; in our County Palatine theſe pleas were conſtantly expreſſed contra Dignitatem Gladii Ceſtriæ.

This famous Sword of Dignity is ſtill remaining in the Britiſh Muſeum. It is in length about four feet; and ſo unweildy, as to be brandiſhed with great difficulty by a very ſtrong man with both his hands. The blade is two-edged, and has this inſcription immediately beneath the hilt---Hugo

¹ Every Baron had four Eſquires, every Eſquire had one Gentleman, and every Gentleman one Valet for their Attendants—Erdeſwicke's Manuscripts.

The Barons too had their free Courts for all pleas and ſuits, except thoſe belonging to the dignity of the Earl's Sword; and they had power of Life and Death.
 The laſt inſtance of this power was exerted in the perſon of Hugh Stringer, who was tried for murder in the Baron of Kinderton's Court, and executed 1597, the 39th of Queen Elizabeth.

Comes Cestriæ; the hilt itself is decorated with pearls. But as a draught of it would have shamed all description; you must blame an ingenious Artist, for not having executed in proper time a designed engraving, from a very elegant drawing in my possession.

But before I conclude this article of Hugh Lupus's Charter, permit me to remind you, that the surname of one of his first Barons, and the lineal dignity of another,¹ is still preserved in the Right Honourable George Venables Vernon, Lord Vernon, BARON OF KINDERTON. And however light our Cheshire Honours may appear at present; yet I am sure your good sense cannot avoid remarking---that while Lord Vernon enjoys his Modern Honours in common with many of his Peers; with regard to his ancient Barony of Kinderton, he is most honourably and singularly Peerless.

This digression, my dear Friend, from the account of our Historical Collectors, I am afraid you will imagine to be tedious. But I have so frequently hazarded the seemingly pompous expression, of the---MONARCHY, and the EMPIRE of CHESHIRE ; that unless I had produced some authentic vouchers for the truth and propriety of this expression, I might have appeared rather to have written with the bombast of Bays in the Rehearsal, than to have preserved the grave fidelity of a Relater of Facts.

¹ Ricardus de Vernon Baro de Shipbrok.—Gilbertus Venables Baro de Kinderton. Whose direct lineal descendant, Peter Venables, Baron of Kinderton, died without issue male towards the conclusion of the last century. His dowager, the Baroness of Kinderton, survived him to the year 1717; and they both lie buried in the same grave in the chancel of the church of Middlewich.—The present George Venables Vernon, Lord Vernon, Baron of Kinderton, is a lineal descendant by the female side.

I shall now therefore proceed with my Sketch of the Materials, for a future History of our Important County ; and shall endeavour to present you with a chronological series of those Literary Sons of our Mater alma Cestriensis---if you will allow me this expression of filial Fondness---who have reflected Honour upon their native soil, by studiously preserving any memorials of her ancient glory.---And in the first place, let me here commemorate the laudable example of WILLIAM ALDERSEY, Mayor of Chester in 1560 : Who finding the list of his predecessors in that office to be most exceedingly defective and confused, ordered a new and exact Arrangement of them to be made, with infinite pains, fidelity, and expence. We may easily judge how corrupt and imperfect their registers were before ; when the name of Alano de Whetley never once occurred in them, though he had served the office of Mayor at least in four several periods of time. And indeed the very great and material difference that

that appears in the separate Lists of these Magistrates, given us by Smith and Webb -- our next collectors -- is a plain indication of the extreme corruption that had vitiated and defaced their Journals.

Our next Historical Collectors, as I have just mentioned to you, were two Natives of Cheshire, WILLIAM SMITH and WILLIAM WEBB; who gleaned up their celebrated Memorials of the ancient Glory of our Palatinate almost two hundred years ago. Though their labours have been consecrated to posterity hand in hand¹, yet Smith is rather prior to Webb in point of time. He was a Pursuivant at Arms, by the style and title of Rouge Dragon; and appears to have made his collections about the year 1590. A copy of these Collections was entrusted to the faithful preservation of Sir Ranulph Crew, Knt. Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench; and the attentive regard of Mr. Ranulph Crew, his Lordship's grandson, for the honour of learning, and his native County, rescued this copy from its not dishonourable concealment, into that distinguished station which it has since enjoyed.---William Smith's literary and antiquarian associate, William Webb, had a learned education in our celebrated University of Oxford; where he took the regular degree of Master of Arts'. He had always a turn and passion for Letters; though the -- Res angusta Domi -- the narrowness of his circumstances, obliged him to submit to the disagreeable drudgery of being many years clerk in the Mayor's Court at Chester; and in the year 1615, he served the office of Under-Sheriff to Sir Richard Lea, of Lea and Dernhale, Knt. At this time he was between fifty and sixty years of age; and most probably made his Collections some where about 1600. Very fortunately for the public, these Collections, like those of Smith's, were rescued from their concealment, by the favourable patronage of Sir Simon Archer, of Tamworth in the County of Warwick, Knt. a great admirer of our National Antiquities.

¹ Their united labours, form the Bulk of King's Vale-Royal, published in Folio 1656.

But before I finally take my leave of our two present Collectors, I must communicate an anecdote to you about William Webb, which is much to his credit as a writer; and yet is almost obscured with the Mantle of Oblivion.--- If you ever attended, my dear Friend, to the stile of his Itinerary through the several Hundreds, you will observe a Poetic Manner in his Diction. In one place he favours us with the conclusion of an encomium upon Sir Hugh Cholmondeley in Latin and English verse, and in another with some stanzas upon a grandson of Sir John Savage; both compositions professedly his own. But I dare engage, you are entirely ignorant, that this said William Webb, “here“ tofore a clerk in the Mayor’s Court at Chester, and some

¹ I have very great reason to believe he was a Member of our then newly founded College of Brazen-Nose. But the printed Catalogues of our Oxford Graduates, go no higher than 1659.

 “ time Under-Sheriff to Sir Richard Lea,” hath left us in Print, a very pleasing, ingenious, and sensible account of the beauties and defects of English poetry¹; which he composed soon after he had taken his regular degree of Master of Arts.

Having mentioned the benevolent hands that rescued these perishing memorials from oblivion; I ought not to conceal from you, that DANIEL KING, a native of our Palatinate, was the person they made choice of to give them birth. King had travelled into foreign parts; where he acquired the ingenious accomplishments of engraving and surveying. And by the help of these, his acquired talents, he has embellished his Work with a variety of useful, curious, and ornamental Sculptures.---A cotemporary writer pays him this compliment upon his creative and preserving talent of engraving---“ That in process of time, he

¹ The title runs thus: “ A Discourse of English Poetry: together with the “ Author’s Judgement touching the Reformation of our English Verse.—By “ William Webb, Graduate.—Imprinted at London, by John Charlewood, “ Quarto, 1586.”

“ hoped

“ hoped Daniel King might outstrip the piety of king Edgar ; erecting more Abbies in brass, than this Monarch did in stone ; though he is said to have built as many as there were days in the year.” And he concludes with this encomium in metre---

“ KINGUS CESTRENSI, CESTRENSIS-PATRIA KINGO,

“ Lucem, alternatim, debet uterque suam.

“ CHESHIRE TO KING, and KING TO CHESHIRE, OWES

“ His Light ; since each receives, what each bestows.¹

But after all these extravagant encomiums, if the Obstetric Hand of Daniel King had reduced the unformed Embrio-Collections of Smith and Webb, into some regularity of form and shape ; by reducing the two parts into a methodical series of history---this publication might have reflected rays of splendor upon our illustrious County. Whereas KING’S-VALE-ROYAL, in its present state of confusion, notwithstanding its pompous title, and notwithstanding it sells for four guineas, is neither more nor less than what I have already told you---a mere farrago of valuable materials. And, what is worse for the public, he has not only transposed some parts of the original labours of his two Authors, but he has published from a very defective copy ; since I have in my possession an AUTHENTIC MANUSCRIPT of this

¹ Fuller’s Worthies of England, page 184.

Work, infinitely more full, and more exact, than even the printed Book of Daniel King.¹

Upon this last article, my dear Friend, I have rather been diffusively minute ; especially too, as the memorials of our Palatinate already published are no part of my professed design in this Letter. But since the whole merit of these two deserving Collectors has been entirely absorbed by the infinitely less meritorious name of KING ; I was willing to preserve some Anecdotes, of one of them at least, not generally known. And I was besides desirous of pointing out a much more correct, and much more improved edition of this Work---If the Great English Blood of Cheshire chief of Men should have unhappily contracted those infirmities of old age,² as to have

¹ Sir William Dugdale is so far from passing any extravagant encomiums upon our publisher and countryman, King ; that he calls him a most ignorant, silly knave. But I hope the worthy Knight means knave, in the antiquated English sense of, fellow, or servant. The old English translation of the Bible has, " Paul the knave of Jesus Christ."—And if we may believe the best commentators upon Virgil, this correct Poet uses the Latin word, fur, in the precise sense of our antiquated word, knave—

Quid Domini facient, audent cum talia Fures ?

Ecloga iii. ver. 16.

² ———Gelidus, tardante senectâ,
Hebet Sanguis, frigentque effætæ in Corpore Vires,

Virg. Æn. v. ver. 395.

ren-

rendered them cold and indifferent to such a future History of their PALATINATE, as may in some measure be equal to the grandeur of the design, and to the illustrious subject it is to treat of.

But now I have taken my leave of this famous Literary Triumvirate--I scarcely know where to turn myself. For the example and encouragement of our great Antiquaries, CAMDEN, COTTON, and SPELMAN, had raised such an enthusiastic passion for the study of our Antiquities about this æra--- that, with your leave, I might almost venture to call it the Augustan Age of Antiquarian Writers. And indeed, several of those I am now going to commemorate, were rather Cotemporaries to our last Collectors, and to each other; than by any means capable of being reduced to a regular series of Chronological Succession.

Coeval then with the preceding, was LAURENCE BOSTOKE; or, as he usually stiled himself, from the place of his birth, and habitation--de Bostoke.!--- This local name having distinguished one of the first families in the County.---The materials he has left behind him are extremely valuable;

“ The river Dan then runs by Bostock; the ancient seat of the noble and knightly family of the Bostocks. Whose vast estates passed to John Savage, by a marriage with Anne, grand-daughter of Sir Adam de Bostock, Knight.”
—Camden’s Britan. vol. i. page 677.—Laurence always spelt his name Bostoke.

and are contained in one Folio Volume, closely written, in a very bad hand. The Articles are Miscellaneous ; Descents, Pedigrees, Notes of Families, Extracts from old Deeds and Records ; and, what is above all, an accurate Visitation of most of our Churches before that sacrilegious Destruction in the Civil War. Whatever was remarkable here, he has attempted to delineate. But he was a bad draughtsman ; and though his designs may be faithful representations, yet they are by no means the Work of any Artist.

Cotemporary with Laurence de Bostoke was SAMPSON ERDESWICKE ; who about the year 1553 laid the foundations of his future learning in a College at Oxford, which, you and I, shall always remember with respect and veneration. Properly speaking, he is the great Antiquary of Staffordshire ; not barely as being a native, but as having principally collected for that County. The survey of this, his native soil, has appeared in print ; with an account of Beeston Castle in Cheshire, annexed to it. But that he designed us larger views, he himself assures us ; and that in part he executed these views, the collections he has left behind him amply testify. In his printed survey, he thus expresses himself to a friend--“ Having disposed with myself
“ to take a further view of the shires of Stafford and Che“ shire, according to promise ; I have set down what I “ have

“ have found, or can yet learn.”---And these Cheshire Discoveries, or at least part of them, are still preserved in two pretty thick quarto, and two octavo manuscripts. The contents of these volumes, like those of Laurence Bostoke, are miscellaneous. They are Descents, Pedigrees, Notes of Families, a Villare of the whole County, the Names of all those who held in Capite, with the ancient Revenue of the Palatinate; and, to crown all---a variety of Extracts from ancient Charters, relative to the several Grants of MANORS; to which he has affixed very fair draughts of an infinite number of CURIOUS SEALS.

But having mentioned the Nursing-College that supplied Erdeswicke with the Milk of polite Literature -- will you permit me to give you an Anecdote, of the first Existence of our Literary Parent; which--agreeable to a former expression--is entirely obscured by the Mantle of Oblivion, even within the circle of her own family? The founders of Brazen-Nose College, you know, were WILLIAM SMITH, Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir RICHARD SUTTON. The latter of whom could pride himself with *William of Wickham*¹, that if he was not himself a man of learning, he was determined to be the Means of instilling it into others. And indeed the several Preservers of the ancient Glory of our Palatinate,

¹ Founder of New College Oxford.

whom

and are contained in one Folio Volume, closely written, in a very bad hand. The Articles are Miscellaneous ; Descents, Pedigrees, Notes of Families, Extracts from old Deeds and Records ; and, what is above all, an accurate Visitation of most of our Churches before that sacrilegious Destruction in the Civil War. Whatever was remarkable here, he has attempted to delineate. But he was a bad draughtsman ; and though his designs may be faithful representations, yet they are by no means the Work of any Artist.

Cotemporary with Laurence de Bostoke was SAMPSON ERDESWICKE ; who about the year 1553 laid the foundations of his future learning in a College at Oxford, which, you and I, shall always remember with respect and veneration. Properly speaking, he is the great Antiquary of Staffordshire ; not barely as being a native, but as having principally collected for that County. The survey of this, his native soil, has appeared in print ; with an account of Beeston Castle in Cheshire, annexed to it. But that he designed us larger views, he himself assures us ; and that in part he executed these views, the collections he has left behind him amply testify. In his printed survey, he thus expresses himself to a friend--“ Having disposed with myself “ to take a further view of the shires of Stafford and Cheshire, according to promise ; I have set down what I “ have

“ have found, or can yet learn.”---And these Cheshire Discoveries, or at least part of them, are still preserved in two pretty thick quarto, and two octavo manuscripts. The contents of these volumes, like those of Laurence Bostoke, are miscellaneous. They are Descents, Pedigrees, Notes of Families, a Villare of the whole County, the Names of all those who held in Capite, with the ancient Revenue of the Palatinate; and, to crown all---a variety of Extracts from ancient Charters, relative to the several Grants of MANORS; to which he has affixed very fair draughts of an infinite number of CURIOUS SEALS.

But having mentioned the Nursing-College that supplied Erdeswicke with the Milk of polite Literature -- will you permit me to give you an Anecdote, of the first Existence of our Literary Parent; which--agreeable to a former expression--is entirely obscured by the Mantle of Oblivion, even within the circle of her own family? The founders of Brazen-Nose College, you know, were WILLIAM SMITH, Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir RICHARD SUTTON. The latter of whom could pride himself with *William of Wickham*¹, that if he was not himself a man of learning, he was determined to be the Means of instilling it into others. And indeed the several Preservers of the ancient Glory of our Palatinate,

¹ Founder of New College Oxford.

whom

whom I am now commemorating; and, who were the ACADEMICAL Sons of Science, imbibed the elements of polite Literature, in this our venerable Seminary, equally with Sampson Erdeswicke. The anecdote then is this; that the Bishop singly formed the Design, and Plan of our much-respected College. But, upon exchanging this transitory for an immortal Life, soon after he had laid the foundations of it; he entrusted the final Completion of his grand Intentions to his Executor Sir Richard Sutton¹. Who, with the enlarged soul of a Man of Cheshire, faithfully executed his trust, by at least doubling the Bishop's bounty. And by this act of magnificence has given rise to the following Address in verse, from the supposed piety of his adopted child---

" Begun by One, but finished by Another;
 " SUTTON he was my Nurse; but SMITH my Mother.
 " Or if the phrase more proper seem, say rather—
 " That SUTTON was my Guardian, SMITH my Father.

" 'Cause

" " In the hundred of Macclesfield lies Sutton: which gave name, and hath
 " continued to be the seat of a family of great worth and worship, the Suttons.
 " Of this house of Sutton, was that ever famous knight, and great patron of " learning, Sir RICHARD SUTTON, one of the founders of the famous College
 " of Brazen-Nose in Oxford. Where, by his bounty, much of our Cheshire-
 " youth receive most worthy education in all good learning and true religion."

Vale-Royal, part 2d. page 26.

" 'Cause equal Kindness they to me exprest,
 " Better I neither love ; or, both the best.
 " If Both they may be call'd, who had One will ;
 " What One design'd, the Other did fulfill."

The warm feelings of your own heart will, I know, forgive me these supposed over-flowings of filial Fondness from our honoured College, to her Munificent and Literary-Parents. And I must be lost myself to every tender, and every refined emotion---if the inestimable Benefits of an ingenuous education did not bind me, by all the ties of gratitude, to commemorate the liberality of those hands, which have dealt out to me these inestimable Benefits. Neither, I am sure, will the Men of Cheshire imagine any pious Memorials of Sir Richard Sutton, foreign to the Design of a History of their County. Since his fostering "Bounty daily contributes to the " Instruction of many of their Cheshire Youth, in all good
 " learning, and true religion." And, as I have already hinted, he has more particularly been the Means of training up in the Groves of Science,² every ACADEMICAL Preserver of the ancient Glory of their Palatinate.

¹ Fuller's Worthies of England, page 182 ; who says, he received his intelligence from his "good Friend, Dr. YATES, Principal of Brazen-Nose."—A Cheshire Man of such Munificence, as to have deserved from his Society the Epithet of—TERTIUS, tantum non, FUNDATOR.

² —Inter Silvas Academi quarere Verum, HOR.

To proceed then in my Chronological Series---With Erdeswicke and Bostock, RALFE STARKIE was Cotemporary; of the family of the Starkies of Stretton; a STATESMAN, a POET, and an ANTIQUARY. His two first characters do not so immediately concern us; though, what can be a stronger evidence of the powers of the human mind, than to see the abilities of a Burleigh, a Spencer, and a Camden, all united in the same person!---The Antiquarian Collections of his, still remaining, are the following: Rolls of Cheshire Families, 1595; a Book of Alphabetical References to these Rolls; and a Book of References to Mr. Erdeswicke's Cheshire Manuscripts. He has besides given us, all the ROYAL GRANTS of our PALATINATE-IMMUNITIES; and *an exact Account of all the Imports and Exports from the Harbour of Chester, during five years of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth,*¹ with the Amount of the Revenue arising from these Port Duties.---His Legacy, however, of Cheshire Collections, would certainly have been more extensive, if the jealousy of James the First had not issued a Warrant² for the seizure of all Mr. Starkie's State Papers; and, amongst these, many of his Antiquarian ones perished. Sir Thomas Wilson, Secretary of State, who executed this Warrant, certifies the seizure of so large a number as 45 Pacquets of Mr. Starkie's Papers.

¹ From the 20th, to the 26th.

² August 14th, 1619.

You will naturally remark the very particular number that was certified. But these backneyed Figures, my dear Friend, had not at that time been elevated above the innocent Insignificance of their Peers, by the unhappy Lunacy of Party, and that Distraction of the Times which is so greatly to be lamented.---Whether you remark it, however, or not, as I have mentioned our Antiquary in two of his superior characters, permit me to speak of him in his third; and to give you a single stanza from his historical, political, and moral Poem, addressed to his mistress, Queen Elizabeth? The principal subject is the melancholy reign of Edward the Second; whose Ghost is supposed to recount his several misfortunes in 581 stanzas--- “ Disclose the wounds receiv’d within his breast?

“ Why, shou’d a wasted spirit spent in woe,
 “ Is’t not enough, that Fortune proves his Foe,
 “ In whose sad frowns is folded his un-rest?
 “ Is’t not enough, to know himself distressed?—
 “ Oh! no; surcharged hearts must needs complain:
 “ Some Ease it is, though small, to tell our Pain.”

I have given you this specimen divested of its antiquated spelling. And I must not conceal from you, for the honour of our Antiquary, that this Poem has, in one Instance, been attributed to the great Spencer. It is mentioned with a perhaps;

perhaps; but it is most untruly conjectural. The Poem is in Mr. Starkie's own hand writing; it has never been even surmised as Spencer's, by the several writers of his Life; and a copy of it is now existing, with a variety of alterations and additions, to move the compassion of James the First. The Author styles himself, Infortunio :---as being the unfortunate Ralfe Starkie, that in 1619 had unhappily incurred the displeasure of this jealous monarch; who ascended the Throne of England at least four years after the death of Edmund Spencer, which happened about 1588.

RALFE STARKEY, you will find to be a name favourable to our Antiquities. For I have now in my own possession, a very curious HERALDICAL MANUSCRIPT, formed from all the Visitations then in Being; with fair draughts of old Seals, Coats, Arms, and Devices. In the first page is the following Remark---“ This Book is augmented in very many “ places out of Mr. Sampson Erdeswicke, Moth, and other “ good Gatherings, by me Ralfe Starkey of London, merchant; second son of John Starkey of Olton, in the “ County of Chester, Esqr. 1610---A lineal descent of which family has been left us by his name-sake, the Antiquary, under the description of the family of Starkey of *Darley, or Olton-Lowe.*¹

¹ “ Starkies is at Dorle, a v miles from Northwich, a scant mile from Oldeton, and a 3 miles from Vale-Royal.”---Leland's Itin. vol. vii. p. 32.

The next Collector, is, ROGER WILCOXON, a Member of the College of Arms ; who has left us two accurate manuscripts in folio, relative to the HERALDICAL HISTORY OF CHESHIRE. He compiled these volumes from every authentic Voucher, and every original Record, he could have recourse to. And, in order to illustrate these his Genealogical Tables, he has preserved a great variety of Inquisitions post mortem, Draughts of Arms in our ancient Mansions, and of Seals appendant to old Deeds ; with many remarkable Extracts from the private Evidences of Families.---But all these several delineations are executed with such an elegance and exactness, as characterize Mr. Wilcoxon a complete draughtsman ; and I speak this with the more confidence, because the larger of the two volumes is now in my possession.

Our succeeding, or rather still cotemporary, Collectors form a family Harmonic-Trio ; a father, son, and grandson, of the surname of CHALONER, and of the several Christian names, THOMAS, JACOB, and JAMES. Thomas was an Arms-painter in Chester about 1594 ; he knew the value of learning sufficiently to give his son a better education than he had received himself. And this son followed the same occupation in Chester, and made Collections, about the year 1620. But it was James, the grandson, who reflected the greatest credit upon his family, by a very concise, accurate, and sensible account of the Isle of Man, printed at the end of King's-Vale-Royal in 1656. He laid the foundations of a learned education in our much-honoured College; and when the parliament invested Lord Fairfax with the seignory of Man, he was one of his Lordship's three Commissioners for settling the affairs of that island.

L greatest

The ANTIQUARIAN COLLECTIONS of all three are valuable. But if a drop of water bears no proportion to the great ocean, it is not to be wondered at, that they should be included and lost in the immensity of that collection which follows.--- This too was formed by another family Harmonic-Trio; a father, son, and grandson, of the surname of HOLME or HOLMES, and all three of the Christian name of RANDAL. Take them for all in all, they were perhaps three of the most extraordinary, and the most pains-taking men that ever existed. Though of the same occupation with the Chaloners, they lived in the utmost degree of amity with them. Though in rather low circumstances, they received the greatest marks of honour and respect¹ from their fellow citizens.

¹ Randal Holmes, the elder, was Mayor of Chester in 1633; and had the peculiar felicity of seeing his son Sheriff the same year. Randal, the son, was Mayor in 1643; and hath left speeches upon record, both on his entering into office, and on his quitting it. Randal, the grandson, was Sheriff of Chester in 1705.

And

And though untinctured almost with letters, they have left the most noble Collection of Antiquarian Learning, for one single County, ever formed by Man.---To particularise this collection, would be writing a volume, rather than a letter. Suffice it, my dear Friend, to tell you, that their LITERARY LABOURS for our Palatinate only, exceed the almost incredible number of 268 LARGE VOLUMES.---A collection of this nature is rather suited to a general Topographical History of all England, than to one single County. And amidst this immense Literary Variety--this dubia cæna of Antiquarianism,--it would really have been distressing to have selected materials, if two Names of great Learning and Abilities, had not already exerted themselves, in forming a very sensible and accurate Epitome of this Collection.

The first was a physician ; Dr. EDWARD WILLIAMSON. Who has digested the essence of this vast mass into a regular Compend, under the title of VILLARE CESTRIENSE. It is first of all ranged under the general head of Hundreds, and then under the lesser one of Parishes. And whatever is curious and intelligent in the original papers, has been carefully preserved by the abridger in a very thick quarto volume. The other Epitomizer was a divine ; Dr. FRANCIS GASTREL, Canon of Christ Church in Oxford, and Bishop of our Diocese of Chester. A name, great in the knowledge of Theology

Theology, and of our national Antiquities. His abridgement is stiled NOTITIA CESTRIENSIS. But the arrangement of this Notitia, is rather an Ecclesiastical, than a Civil one. It relates to the whole Diocese; is divided under the general head of Archdeaconries, the lesser one of Deanries, and the still less division of Parishes.---Great, however, as the merit of his Lordship was, it has been rendered still greater, in being the happy, and the fortunate instrument of preserving these invaluable papers. The executors of Randal Holmes, the grandson, offered them in sale to the Corporation of Chester. But as the treasury here, I suppose, was not rich; they might perhaps have gone into the market,¹ to have embalmed even frankincense and odours, if his Lordship had not purchased them for the noble library of the then Earl of Oxford; and, eventually, for the mighty emolument of the public.

Now we are speaking of Bishops of Chester, I must remind you of Two; who, by their Collections, have been ornaments to the see. Dr. JOHN BRIDGEMAN in 1619, and Dr. NICHOLAS STRATFORD in 1689. The first hath left behind him, a very accurate Account of the Revenues and Endowments of the Church, in a large folio volume; which goes

¹ Deferor in Vicum, vendentem Thus et Odores. HOR.

goes under the title of BISHOP BRIDGEMAN'S LEDGER. And he drew up a most excellent scheme for the revival of Ecclesiastical Discipline and Order in his Diocese; after that scene of anarchy and confusion which had been occasioned by the civil wars.---The Collections of the other consist of Original Letters; which demonstrate his Lordship to have been a man of consummate business, candour, judgement, and resolution. We are indebted for their preservation to the care of that great Antiquary, Bishop Tanner;¹ and I am happy in having a transcript of them in my possession.

For the sake of arranging these three ornaments of our Church together, I have been guilty of the Anachronism of a few years. I must therefore return, to celebrate the names of CATHERALL, VERNON, BRERETON, BOOTH, and ASHMOLE, as CHESHIRE COLLECTORS.---The family of Catherall or Caterall is of Derbyshire; and has run through the several names of Bulkeley and Bird. What has been left us under this family name, is comprised in a folio volume with the following title---“CATERALL'S BOOK, of the Antiquity and Gentry of Cheshire.”

Mr. WILLIAM VERNON is one of our best Antiquaries. He lived at Shakerley in Lancashire, about the year 1630;

¹ Thomas Tanner was consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph, Jan. 23, 1731-2.

but having considerable property at Hulme in Cheshire, he collected principally for the HISTORY of our PALATINATE. His Books of Antiquarian Researches appear, with some degree of probability, to have been so numerous, as to have for their marks of distinction the several letters of the alphabet. Liber C, D, and R, or at least the substance of them, are in being. But whether the others are perished, or rather, whether they ever existed, is at this time of day uncertain.---The materials, that compose these remaining Books, are very valuable. They consist of, Extracts from diverse remarkable Deeds of the ancient Earls of Chester; Extracts from other authentic Instruments, and original Records; Descents and Anecdotes of Families; with a variety of curious Particulars relative to several Towns and Parishes in the County.---That his Intelligence, in these respects, might be the more accurate and complete, Mr. Vernon was indefatigable in his enquiries; and he has very gratefully preserved the names of those Cheshire Gentlemen,¹ who favoured him with any material information.

¹ Merburie of Merburie, Dutton of Dutton, Sir Edmund Fitton, John Millington, Peter Daniel, William Harecourt, John Oldfield, Downes of Shrigley, Cotton of Cotton, Sir John Davenport, John Booth, and Henry Manwaring of the Tower of London.

Sir

Sir WILLIAM BRERETON, of Honford, is a Collector only by Accident. He represented our County in the Long Parliament. And though he had been a Royal Ward, yet he bore arms against his Guardian and Sovereign, by accepting the Post of General of the Parliament-Forces, in Cheshire, and the adjoining Counties.---My Lord Clarendon,¹ in several parts of his History, has strongly and accurately marked the different Genius of the two Parties at that Time. The Royalists were open, incautious, dissipated, and intrepid. The Parliamentarians, were close, wary, sober in their manners, and extremely attentive to every opportunity of advantage. Of this we have the strongest proof in the JOURNALS of Sir William Brereton; a very accomplished gentleman, and, upon the whole, very unexceptionable in his command. There is scarcely a circumstance during the four years he was General, that he did not commit to writing; and not even a single letter appears to have been penned, of which he did not preserve a copy. The fruits of this indefatigable industry are collected into FIVE FOLIO VOLUMES; written in a small, but very fair hand. And I am sufficiently happy in calling myself the owner of these volumes.

¹ History of the Rebellion, 8vo. vol. iii. pag. 345, et passim.

Coeval with Sir William Brereton, was Mr. JOHN BOOTH of Twamlowe; a very intelligent, and careful Collector.--- The sensible Author of Bucklow Hundred had the free use of his Materials; and he has preserved the nature of their contents, by making frequent references to their authority. In one place he calls them---¹ “John Booth of Twamlow’s, “Book of Pedigrees;” and in another---² “John Booth of “Twamlow’s Book of his own Collections.”---After this Account of them, any thing further from my pen becomes unnecessary. And I shall only add, that the present Mr. Booth of Twamlowe, with a civility and an obligingness usual to him, has promised me the liberal use of his Ancestors Collections.

We come next to ELIAS ASHMOLE. A Name conspicuous in the Republick of Letters; as having been the munificent Founder of the Museum at Oxford. We owe his Collections to a Visitation of this County by the celebrated Dugdale; afterwards Sir William, and at that time Norroy King at Arms. The friendship of Ashmole, for his future father-in-law, influenced him to accompany Dugdale in this Visitation. And his Thirst after Knowledge, and Antiquities, has exerted itself during this Visit, in preserving a great Variety of very curious Particulars.---The Draughts of ancient Seals, Arms, Monuments, and Fenestral Antiquities,--both CIVIL and SACRED—he hath bequeathed us; are in reality so many elegant pictures, as well as so many faithful representations. And the remains of that most superb mansion of the Delves's at Doddington, would have conveyed to us very little idea of its ancient grandeur, if some parts of it had not still existed, by the means of Ashmole's immortalizing pencil.

¹ Page 218, line 16.

² Page 257, line 31.

There is a groupe, however, of noble Statues still remaining there, which are too splendidly glorious in themselves, and too much for the honour of our Palatinate, to be passed over in silence. I mean those of the valiant Lord Audley, and his four celebrated Esquires. My Lord Audley's is most probably an original one; but I should suppose the other four to be rather coeval with the æra of this superb mansion; the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. These statues are as large as life; and are supposed to represent Delves of Doddington, Dutton of Dutton, *Foulshurst of Crewe*¹, and Hawkeston of Wrine-Hill.---Though this last, as well as Lord Audley, had possessions in Staffordshire--- yet, properly speaking, they were All Five, Men of Cheshire, by birth, family, and inheritance. It was principally owing to the value of these illustrious warriors, that our most puissant Hero, Edward the Black Prince, Earl of Chester, gained the immortal battle of Poitiers, in the year 1356. ---The particulars of Lord Audley's Exploits, in that battle, are thus related by our Historians---

¹ A very fine Altar-Tomb of Alabaster to the Memory of a Foulshurst of Crewe; and, Tradition says,—this very Foulshurst—is still remaining in the chancel of Bartomley Church in Cheshire. The recumbent effigy upon the tomb, in complete armour at full length, is visibly of the same age with the statue of Lord Audley. And to you, my Friend, pleased remembrance obliges me to add;—that in these peaceful shades of Bartomley, I passed the happy innocence of childhood.

“ But the most remarkable instance of Honour, and Valour, was the Lord James Audley ; who, having vowed “ to be the foremost of the battle, performed his word, and “ confirmed it with many wounds ; for which the Prince “ having rewarded him with five hundred marks a year, “ Fee-Simple in England, he presently gave it to four of “ his Esquires, who had underwent the same dangers with “ him. The Prince knowing it, asked him---Whether he “ did not accept his gift ? He answered, Yes ! but those “ Men had deserved it as well as he had himself ; and had
 “ more need of it. The Prince was pleased with this reply,
 “ and gave him five hundred marks more ; as if he resolved,
 “ that so much worth should not go unrewarded.” ---And my Lord Audley, as a further and perpetual memorial of their merit, enjoined them to bear in some part of their

* Complete History of England, vol. i. page 226.

Coat of Arms, his own proper Atchievement--- GULES A FRET OR.---Which honourable injunction, has been constantly observed by these four distinguished Families.

But you must not imagine, my dear Friend, that this illustrious instance of Cheshire Prowess, and Cheshire Heroism, is a singular one in the Annals of English History. Since the genuine character of our County, has been as much marked for MARTIAL GLORY, as for unbounded Hospitality. And if you mistrust that partial fondness which arises from the place of our Nativity, and which always plays around the human heart; pray take the unbiaffed sentiments of that admired Poet, *Michael Drayton*¹; who thus celebrates the ROYAL Magnanimity of our Palatinate---

- “ Of all our Counties, SHE, the place of Palatine doth hold;
- “ And thereto hath her HIGH REGALITIES enroll’d.
- “ Besides in many Fields, since Conquering William came,
- “ Her People she hath prov’d, to her eternal Fame.
- “ All, Children of her own, the Leader and the Led;
- “ The mightiest Men of Bone, in her full Bosom bred²:

And the same Poet, in a succeeding stanza, ingenuously confesses---that the conquest of the Imperial Crown of ¹ “ Michael Drayton was born at Hartshill in the Parish of Atherston in Warwickshire, 1563.” Biogr. Britan.

² Poly. Olb. song xi. ver. 10, et seq.

France,

France, was chiefly owing to the Bills and Bows of the hardy Cheshire Yeomanry---

- “ Their Yeomanry, THEY still, endeavoured to uphold :
 “ For rightly, whilst Herself, BRAVE ENGLAND was of old ;
 “ And our courageous Kings, Us forth, to Conquest led,
 “ Our Armies in those Times—ne’er thro’ the World so dread !—
 “ Of our tall Yeomen, were, and Footmen, for the most ;
 “ Who, with their Bills and Bows, may confidently boast,
 “ Our LEOPARDS¹, they so long, and bravely, did advance
 “ Above the FLOW’r DE LYS ; even in the Heart of France².

And among the number of those Cheshire Heroes of Antiquity, who have planted the Banners of England even in the very Heart of France ; the names of Sir Hugh Calvely, and Sir Robert Knowles are much too illustrious in our Annals to be omitted. The great Camden thus characterises the first of them---“ At some further distance, on the west “ side of the river Weever, stands Calveley ; which has given “ both seat and name to that noble family, the Calveley’s.
 “ Of whom, in Richard the Second’s time, was Sir Hugh de “ Calveley ; who, in France, had the reputation of so valiant
 “ a soldier, that nothing was held impregnable to his

¹ Poly-Olb. song xi. ver. 27, et seq.

² “ He well calls the Coat of England, Leopards.—Lions and Leopards in princely “ Acceptation have been taken indifferently.”—Selden’s Notes on Poly-Olb.

“ courage

"courage and conduct."---And it was not only, in the Field of Battle, that we find him this invincible commander. Since the QUEEN OF ARRAGON became captivated by his irresistible Attractions, and resigned her hand to his, at the Altar of Hymen; as the joint quartering of their united Arms upon Sir Hugh's Tomb incontestibly confirms.

But however celebrated Sir Hugh Calveley may be in the Records of Military Fame; he is at least equalled by his valiant affociate, Sir Robert Knowles. Who was advanced, from the rank of a common foldier, to the most distinguished station, by that excellent judge of military merit, our renowned Edward the Third. The faith of History represents the Atchievements of Sir Robert, almost in the stile and manner of Romantic Chivalry---" that when he commanded in France, under our puissant Monarch, he drove the enemy before him like Flocks of Sheep; and battered down their Citadels into such spiry and forked Ruins, that for several years afterwards they went by the name of "Knowles's MITRES." His last act of prowess was the suppression of Wat Tyler. And then, full of years and glory, he resigned his breath to a superiour Enemy, the Great Conqueror of Human Nature¹; leaving behind him this accomplished Character :---That his Charity was equal to his Valour; and that he was as much endeared to the English, as he was dreaded by the French.

¹ Camden's Britannia, vol. i. page 675.

Five several instances of the most Heroic Atchievements of this Sir Hugh Calveley, are recorded by Fuller in his Worthies of England, page 179.

But it is not only the Gallie Nation which has had reason to dread the Valour of our Countrymen; the Scots too, may rue the day, wherein they experienced the irresistible force and power of their Arms. For when Lord Hertford, afterwards Duke of Somerset, vanquished the Scotch Army and took their CAPITAL, in that rapid expedition which he made into the Heart of Scotland---he thought the gallant behaviour of the Cheshire Soldiers entitled them to some superiour marks of Honour and Distinction. And he accordingly knighted eighteen Gentlemen of that County, upon the very spot, which had so lately been the witness of their valour¹.

¹ Aug. 15, 1407.—His Acts of Charitable Munificence, are the following : The stone bridge at Rochester in Kent, with a chapel and chantry at the east end of it; a college and hospital at Pontefract in Yorkshire, which he endowed with 180l. per Annum; and a hospital at Rome for the entertainment of English Pilgrims.——Lambert's Kent, Edit. 1596, page 392. Weaver's Fun. Mon. page 436. Fuller's Worth. page 179.

Here, my dear Friend, I could have wished to have finally completed the career of their Military Fame. But the sad tale of Truth forces me to add; that, in those domestic and intestine Wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, the intrepid courage of our Countrymen, proved almost as fatal to themselves, as it had ever done to their foreign Enemies. The admired Poet---whom I have so frequently quoted, I am afraid even to satiety---thus beautifully paints their fraternal fury in his description of the battle of Blore-Heath---

¹ At Leith in Scotland, on the 11th of May, 1544. Take the Names of them alphabetically—

William Brereton	Philip Egerton	John Massey
Roger Brereton	Richard Egerton	Edmund Savage
Urian Brereton	Thomas Holford	Edward Savage
Hugh Calveley	John Legh	Laurence Smith
Hugh Cholmondeley	Piers Legh	Thomas Venables
William Davenport	Raufe Leycester	Edward Warren.

And the succeeding day he created seven more of them Esquires; by honouring them with the ensigns peculiar to that rank—a Collar of SS about their Necks, and a Pair of silver Spurs. Their Names were,

Richard Birkenhead	Thomas Cowper	Raufe Leech	Adam Troutbeck
Roger Boydel	Hugh Dutton	William Sneed

There

" There ¹ DUTTON, DUTTON kills ; a DONE doth kill a DONE ;

" A BOOTH, a BOOTH ; and LEIGH by LEIGH is overthrown ;

" A VENABLES, against a VENABLES doth stand ;

" And TROUTBECK fighteth with a TROUTBECK, hand to hand :

" There MOLINEUX doth make a MOLINEUX to die ;

" And EGERTON the strength of EGERTON doth try.

" Oh, CHESHIRE, wert thou mad ! of thine own Native Gore,

" So much, until this day, thou never shed'st before !

" Above two thousand Men, upon the earth were thrown,

" Of whom the greatest part, were naturally thine own² ?

Such, my dear Friend, once was, the Martial Prowess of the Men of Cheshire ! And such, I have no doubt, it would be again, if their Country called them forth into the Field of Glory³. But having barely hinted at this part of their Provincial Character, in the beginning of this Letter---my Sketch of Historic Materials must have been incomplete, if I had not marked them as much for their MILITARY FAME,

¹ This Battle was fought in 1459, at Blore-Heath in Staffordshire. Lord Audley commanded the Lancastrians, and the Earl of Salisbury the Yorkists; who gained a compleat Victory.

² Drayton's Poly-Olb. song xxii.

³ Upon the first embodying of the Militia in the late war, there were more Gentlemen of Rank and Fortune in the Cheshire Corps, than in any other Militia-Regiment throughout the Kingdom. Who submitted, for many Months, to the disagreeable duty of guarding the lines at Brompton near Chatham; and several of them made their marches on Foot, equally with the meanest Soldier.

as for their UNBOUNDED HOSPITALITY of Yore.---Besides, if Musick's charms

“ Can soften Rocks, or bend the knotted Oak.”

what human mind can be so entirely divested of every humane sentiment, as, at the sight or mention of those Statues at Doddington, not to reflect and descant with uncommon pleasure upon the Heroic Acts of those illustrious Worthies.

But---“ Why should Warriours all our Praise engross?”---since the milder glories of the Sons of Peace, are infinitely more beneficial to mankind.--I shall therefore resume my Chronological Series with a Name, the most distinguished in the literary and peaceful Annals of our Historical Collectors. The whole Choir of whom, ought to rise with due obedience, to the venerable person I am now enrolling in their number---

Ut Gallo, Phæbi Chorus assurrexerit Omnis.

“ Cum Majorum Imagines intuerentur, vehementissime sibi animum ad “ Virtutem accendi. Scilicet, non Ceram illam, neque Figuram, tantam Vim in “ sese habere; sed memoria rerum gestarum eam flammam egregiis Viris in “ Pectore crescere; neque prius sedari, quam Virtus eorum famam atque gloriam “ adæquaverit.”

Sallust Bell. Jugurth. sect 4.

P

This

This accomplished personage is Sir PETER LEYCESTER, the celebrated Author of the Antiquities of Cheshire, published in 1672. Our much-respected Literary Parent received every mark of gratitude, and every possible degree of honour, from this her distinguished Son. In a manuscript note to an enlarged and corrected Copy of his Antiquities, he expresses himself thus under the parish of Mobberley---“ Samuel Shipton, M. A. Rector of Mobberley, “ died in 1670 ; an honest, learned Gentleman ! who was “ my Tutor whilst I was of Brazen-Nose College, Oxford, “ in the years 1631--2--3.” And in other parts of his Manuscript Additions, he speaks, with extreme pleasure, “ of “ his having been for some years--he hopes--the not unworthy “ Member of a Society, which is entitled to so much veneration from our Palatinate.”---It ought not, however to be concealed, that these Antiquities of Cheshire, published by Sir Peter, have been much complained of for the unenterprising and uninteresting manner in which they are written. But notwithstanding a seeming harshness that may perhaps appear in them, they have really an infinite degree of intrinsic merit. And the MANUSCRIPT COLLECTIONS this very able and accurate Historian hath left behind him, reflect almost as much honour on his literary Character, as the Antiquities he has published. They extend at least to the vast number of TWENTY VOLUMES. And, as LEYCESTER will always always be a Name, consecrated to Learning and our National Antiquities; the extreme attention of the present amiable Lady Leycester¹, to whatever she imagines may contribute to the illustration and the glory of our Palatinate, hath generously consigned all these volumes to the care and confidence of your Friend.---It hath been asserted, seemingly with some degree of truth, that Sir Peter collected for all the several Hundreds. My own opinion is, that he did not collect for them professedly. But his Manuscript-Remains certainly relate to, and extend over, the whole County. They contain a prodigious fund of very valuable intelligence; and will greatly tend to the completion of his favourite wish, at the conclusion of his History of Bucklow Hundred.---“ Thus have I, by God’s assistance, run “ through Bucklow Hundred; according to such evidences

“ and Records, as I had carefully collected concerning the “ same. If I had not met with some obstructions by some “ Gentlemen, who, either out of Waywardness or Jealousy, “ did refuse to let me have the perusal of their Evidences,
“ some things might possibly have been further discovered
“ and illustrated.---In the mean time, I wish this may in“ cite some more able hand to undertake the like for the “ reviving of those decayed Monuments of Antiquity in the other

¹ Her Ladyship is the third daughter and coheiress of Sir William Fleming, Bart. of Roydall in Westmoreland.

“ Hundreds

“ *Hundreds of this our County, which yet lie buried and covered in the rubbish of devouring Time*¹. ”

The succeeding Collector to Sir Peter Leycester, is your Maternal Great-Grandfather, ROGER WILBRAHAM of Townes-End, in the Parish of Namptwich. This family name is undoubtedly local, and was more anciently written Wilburham. They are descendants, by the female line, from one of the Nobles of Hugh Lupus; Richard Vernon, Baron of Shipbroke². And the Townes-End Branch derives its stem from Randal, the second son of Thomas Wilbraham of Woodhay, in the Reign of Henry the Fourth. Our great Antiquary, in his *Britannia*³, thus describes this ancient family---“ Hence, the Weaver continues its course southward, not far from Woodhay; where the famous and knightly family of the Wilburham’s lived long in great repute⁴. ”---The COLLECTIONS Mr. Wilbraham left behind him principally relate to the Town and District of Namptwich.

¹ Sir Peter Leycester, Bart. was descended from Sir Nicholas de Leycester, Lord of the Manor of Netber-Tabley, in 1276. Where this distinguished family has flourished ever since.—Sir Peter was born in 1613, and died in 1678.

² King’s-Vale-Royal, part 2d. page 145.

³ Vol. i. page 674.

⁴ The Heiress of the Wilbrahams of Woodhay carried the whole estate, by marriage, into the Family of Talmache, Earl of Dysart.

And

And the copy of them, now in my possession, sufficiently demonstrates the industry and attention with which he prosecuted his Antiquarian Researches. As he was blessed with the Inheritance of Wisdom---Length of Days in his right hand, and in his left hand Riches and Honour'---it is by no means matter of surprise, that his Literary-Remains upon this subject are as complete as we could possibly have wished them.

Cotemporary with your worthy Ancestor, was, an ingenious Collector of the name of HARRINGTON; whose Family, though now no more, had once considerable property at Urdeshall. His Collections have been consigned to Fame by the celebrated Bishop Gibson, in his first Edition of the *Britannia*¹. His Lordship there tells us,---“ that the “ defects of Doddridge and others, in tracing the Origin of “ the County Palatine, are in a great measure supplied by “ what the learned Mr. Harrington has left upon the sub“ ject. A gentleman, by whose death, learning in gene“ ral, and particularly the Antiquities of this County, which “ he had designed to illustrate and improve, have suffered “ greatly.”---And upon this head, I am sorry to sympathize with this venerable Prelate, in most sincerely lament-

¹ He died in the year 1705, at the advanced age of Eighty-five.

² Camden Brit. (Edit. 1695) page 566.

ing---that all my enquiries, after Mr. Harrington's Cheshire Illustrations, have not been able to discover the least vestige where any of his learned Treasures may lie concealed.

My Chronological Series brings me now to the Collectors of our Age, and Century.---At the head of whom stands, deservedly, the Rev. Mr. John Stones, late Minor-Canon of our Cathedral, and Rector of Coddington in Cheshire. His Collections are included in one folio, and two thick quarto, volumes. But it is not the Bulk, so much as the Value, of the materials we are to attend to. And Mr. Stones appears to have been a person of such consummate judgement, with such an intimate knowledge of his subject, as to have collected nothing from the Antiquarian Mine, except Ore of the richest and the purest Gold.--These valuable materials, the friendship of his son, and the obliging favour of the learned Dean and Chapter, have kindly entrusted to my perusal and fidelity.

Mr. Stone's successor, in our Chronological Series, was John Warburton, Somerset-Herald; whose indefatigable Labours have so greatly contributed to the ornament and illustration of almost every County in the Kingdom. His method was perhaps singularly sensible---to glean up every thing, either in print or manuscript, which had the most distant relation to that particular County he intended to elucidate.

elucidate. These scattered fragments, like the Sybil's Leaves, he bound up into volumes suitable to the size of the papers he had collected; either folio, quarto, or octavo.---His Essex Gleanings are now in my possession, through the communicative kindness of John Leake, Esq. Chester-Herald. And though I have not hitherto received the Cheshire Collections, yet the Essex Papers give me a sufficient insight into the nature of those materials, of which I have the absolute and the obliging promise. It is scarcely worth while to particularize his printed fragments, relative to our Palatinate---An Abstract of his manuscript Collections is as follows-- “ A Calendar of the Manors in Cheshire, with the several Fees the Lords of the said Manors paid to the Earl of Chester; and the Names of the Proprietors to the year 1710, quarto.---An Account of the principal Families in Cheshire, with the Lands they held in the said County, from the 33d of Edward the Third, to the 24th of Henry the Seventh, folio.---A register of the Black Prince, and Homage due to the Earl of Chester; with the names of the Principal Families, Lords of Manors, Lordships, &c. from the 3d of Edward the Third, to the 29th of Elizabeth, folio.---A variety of Maps, Plans, and Profiles; with manuscript notes by Plot, Warburton, and others; and whatsoever is curious in the Repositories of the “ Heralds-

“Herald's-Office, the Harleian Library, and the Office of Record, relative to the County Palatine of Chester.”---

Here, my dear Friend, ends the Abstract of these most useful and most interesting Materials. Which form a strong contrast with the succeeding COLLECTORS I must now give you an account of;---as these are rather in detached pieces, than in any manner the least systematical. They come from the hand of a person fond of Antiquities, and thoroughly acquainted with every ancient circumstance of our NATIVE CITY. Of this Horfeley had ample proof in his Cestrian Researches for his Britannia Romana. And I have written as well as living evidence to declare---that though he has studiously concealed the name of his benefactor, yet if Mr. CARRINGTON¹ had not been the guiding Index of his Enquiries, Horfeley's Account of Roman Remains in Chester would have been exceedingly imperfect.

What has been said of the preceding COLLECTIONS, may be applied to those I shall next commemorate.---As physic is a profession, some how or other, congenial with Antiquities; the late Dr. GOWER of Chester, a quondam Member of our honoured College, and who died in 1745, hath left us many curious and sensible Remarks upon this subject¹. The very extensive Practice of his Profession enabled him to make very extensive Enquiries. But then this Practice incapacitated him from committing a great deal to Writing. His Remarks consequently are detached, desultory, and unconnected. But still they point out the hand of a Master. And those who remember him, need no account from me, how much he excelled in the several accomplishments of a Gentleman, a Scholar, and a Physician.---You must excuse me, however, my dear Friend, applying to myself upon this tender occasion, what Milton has said of our first Parents, upon the Loss of Paradise---

¹ I have now in my possession the most curious manuscript I have yet seen upon the Antiquities of Chester. It was the property of Mr. Carrington; who has greatly enlarged it, and continued it to our own times.

“ Some Natural Tears they dropt”—

These congenial studies, of Physic and Antiquities, have given rise to another very able, but much more industrious Collector; Dr. COWPER of Overley, Fellow of the Antiquary Society, and Mayor of Chester in 1754.---His COLLECTIONS *chiefly relate to the City, and its Environs; are digested into Annals, after the manner of Peck's Stamford, and are sufficiently numerous to be arranged in three folio volumes*². Had the Doctor enjoyed a longer period of existence, we might have expected a complete and diffusive History of our native City. But since---Diis aliter visum est---we have only to lament; that a Diffidence, inseparable from Learning, should have absolutely prohibited any perusal of his large Collections. Especially too after the Specimen he has given us in Print of his Antiquarian Abilities---“in his Summary of the Life, and of the celebrated “Shrine, of St. Werburgh.”

¹ The late Dr. Gower had one of the most elegant and best digested Collections of Medals of any Gentleman in Cheshire.

² This intelligence about the Contents of Dr. Cowper's Collections, comes from his intimate Friend, Mr. Norris, Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries.

The last Collector I shall mention, is a Name, my dear Friend, that is sacred to yourself. Since it is the late worthy RECORDER of the City of Chester; who was a warm and zealous Friend to all its corporate Rights, and to the whole Circle of its Interests. Was I writing to any other than to you, I should certainly mention him in the character of a Lawyer, of great knowledge and abilities in his profession; and who had besides a strong tincture for literary pursuits, with a leading passion for the elucidation of *legal Antiquities*¹. Of this he has left behind him ample proofs, in the COLLECTIONS, your Friendship has favoured me with.

¹ Considering the hereditary Claim you have, by both your Parents, to the Study of our National Antiquities---I shall take the Liberty to remind you of two striking Lines in Virgil; though I will not offend you by any Application of them—

Ecquid, in Antiquam Virtutem, animosque Viriles, Et Pater Æneas, et Avunculus excitat Hector?

It

It is true, these Collections are not copious; but then their design and purport have stamped such an inestimable value on them, as to make us earnestly wish they had extended beyond a single folio volume.---While our earliest Records, are, either now sleeping in profound obscurity, or mouldering away in their secure Repository of the Castle; they will yet live in the Recorder's COPY--by the means of those very sensible and judicious Extracts he has made from them. And, to crown the whole of his laborious Researches, he has added a Glossary, ingeniously explaining all the antiquated Words and Phrases that occur in the originals.

Having now done with the Human, or, if you please, the Animate-Collectors of our County Evidences---I shall proceed to mention a few; which, with your leave, I will venture to call the Inanimate Ones. I mean those family Mansions, that, by the Die of Chance, have been consecrated to the Preservation of Cheshire Antiquities. The few I shall commemorate, are the mansions of CREW, DUTTON, and MERBURY; not, as the only Cheshire Repositories, but I believe the principal ones; and, which contained a variety of Deeds and Records, beyond the private evidences of their own Lords and Masters. These very ancient Mansions have given local Names to as many ancient and distinguished Families. And that Crew-Hall should have been the tutelary server of Antiquarian Treasures, we can scarcely wonder; when, above a century ago, Mr. RANULPH CREW rescued, from their perishable State, the first Memorials we have in Print of the former Splendour of our Palatinate.*
Pre-

This accomplished Gentleman excelled to that degree in the Polite-Arts, and particularly in Drawing---that his Geographical Delineations were impossible to be distinguished from the best engraved Maps. And, unhappily for his native County! the very Means he made use of for the Improvement and Extension of his Accomplishments, turned out the melancholy instruments of his ruin---having been barbarously assassinated at Paris in the year 1656.

I have already told you, that this amiable Young Man was the grandson of Sir Ranulph Crew, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's-Bench in 1624---Who was not more distinguished, by his Knowledge in the Laws of his Country, than by his superiour Skill in Architecture. Of this, the pleasing and elegant Structure of Crew-Hall will remain an indisputable proof, as long as the most beautiful ancient mansion, perhaps, in the whole kingdom shall exist. And, what is much more for his Lordship's character, the Virtues of his Heart, were at least equal to the Abilities of his Head. Since he was honourably discharged from all his *Legal Employments*¹ for declaring his utter and determined dislike to a Measure, the most disagreeable at that time to his Country².---Sir Ranulph's descendant, John Crew, Esquire, inherits his Lordship's Distinction in the County, as well as his large Fortunes---being one of its present Representatives. And he has shewed as much Taste in the beautiful Arrangement and Disposition of his Grounds, as his illustrious Ancestor displayed in the Construction of this pleasing Edifice. Thus uniting in the same Family those grand Exertions of Taste, which Mr. Pope thought sufficient honour to be enjoyed separate and distinct---

* See page 24.

Who plants like Bathurst, and who builds like Boyle?

But of the three Mansions, which I have been bold enough to distinguish by the name of Inanimate Collectors, I apprehend the Edifice and HALL OF DUTTON---during the flou-

¹ November 10, 1626.

² My Lord Clarendon expresses his Disapprobation of the Expedient of Ship-Money in the following nervous Manner — “ And here the Damage and Mischief “ cannot be expressed, that the Crown and State sustained in the deserved Re“ proach and Infamy that attended the Judges, by being made Use of in this,
“ and like Acts of Power; there being no Possibility to preserve the Dignity, “ Reverence, and Estimation of the Laws themselves, but by the Integrity
“ and Innocency of the Judges.”

Hist. of the Rebell. vol. i. page 70.

rishing æra of that most respectable and superb Family---to have been the principal Asylum of our fugitive and perishable Records. The Fate of this Family must necessarily remind us of the Uncertainty of all Human Grandeur. Since after deriving their descent from ODARD, coeval and consanguineous with the Norman Conqueror, their Name and Family is no more. And we may weep over their Manés in the same accents of generous pity, as the downfall of the State of Ilium is lamented---

“ That Corn now grows, where Troy Town stood.”

For what circumstance can be more humiliating to terrestrial Magnificence, than the Reflection---that after they had flourished in the very spot, where ODARD had first seated them, “ a Family of great Worth and Antiquity, and as “ it were almost a constant succession of Knights for above “ six hundred years”---the Remembrance of them should now as effectually have vanished, as that of “ a Guest which “ had tarried only a single day.”--Their great Progenitor too, the famous Odard, like his Kinsman HUGH LUPUS, had a celebrated Sword of Dignity, constantly preserved at Dutton, as an Heir-Loom of the Family. Which, in the year 1665, was the property of Lady Kilmorey, sole daughter and heirefs of Thomas Dutton of Dutton¹, Efquire. But into whose custody this memorable Relick has been fince configned, you may naturally imagine, would not to me be an unpleafing, or an uninterefting, article of intelligence. And the Fate of many of their valuable Records is equally as uncertain, as that of this Sword of Dignity. Since it is not to be imagined, that the fame carelefs hand which diffipated their large poffeffions, would preferve their literary Remains; and, alas! to him---their ufelefs and moft insignificant of Trifles.---But Chance, in this inftance at leaft, has been more favourable than Design. Some of them are now in the poffeffion of the prefent worthy Mr. Leeche of Carden; and I have in my own custody a Record of great confequence, infcribed, “Liber Petri Dutton armigeri 1650.”

* Hist. of Bucklow Hundred page 248, line 34.

¹ There was a Privilege of licenfing the Minftrels, peculiar to this ancient Family, much too remarkable to be omitted. The original Grant came from our renowned Earl, RANDAL BLUNDEVILLE, to ROGER LACY, Conftable of Chefter; and his fon, John Lacy, affigned the Privilege to the Family of DUTTON. The Anniversary of this Solemnity was constantly celebrated on the Festival of St. John the Baptift; by a regular Proceffion of all the Minftrels to the Church of this Tutelary Saint in the City of Chefter.—But after having been constantly obferved for at leaft 550 years, it feems to have been difcontinued in 1758. And as an inftance how facred, thofe exclusive Privileges, which had been granted to us by our CHESHIRE MONARCHS, were efteemed by Legislative Wifdom; the Act of the 29th of Elizabeth, which declares all Itinerant Minftrels to be vagabonds, particularly excepts the Minftrel-Jurifdiction, of JOHN DUTTON, of Dutton in Cheshire, Efq.

What

What has been said of the great Family of Dutton, may be applied, mutatis mutandis, to the Family of MERBURY. ---Though they flourished for many Centuries, in the highest degree of Reputation, and of Honour; yet their Possessions, and their Papers, have long since passed into other hands. But I have many reasons to imagine, that the original LEDGER BOOK¹ of the magnificent Abbey of Vale-Royal, whilom in the possession of the Merburies, is now in the Library of my valuable and most esteemed Friend, THOMAS CHOLMONDELEY, Esq. of Vale-Royal, the late amiable and public-spirited Representative of Cheshire.

Here then, my dear Friend, ends the Completion of my Promise---a short, but very imperfect Account of the Characteric-Genius of the Men of Cheshire, and of the Collections for a History of our Palatinate, in a series almost strictly chronological. From these Collections, and other inestimable Remains, I am convinced a History might be formed of our native County, infinitely superiour to any History, yet existing, of any County in Great Britain. Or, if you please, a History that shall as much excel Dugdale's Warwickshire, as this celebrated History is supposed to excel those of all our Provincial Districts. Since at present it certainly ranks amongst them in the same distinguished manner, as the "Moon is poetically said to shine amongst the "lesser Luminaries."

¹ "The Ledger Book of Vale-Royal Abby now in Possession of Thomas Merbury of Merbury, nigh Great Budworth, Esq. 1666. A copy whereof remains among the Evidences at Dutton."

Hist. of Bucklow Hund. p. 220, l. 18.

But notwithstanding my Love of my native Soil, and my avowed Passion for these my favourite Pursuits; I have not, I fear, a Sufficiency of Health or Leisure, much less Abilities, for this very arduous Task. I will assist to the utmost I am able; but as to assuming of the Lead---if the properest study of mankind is Man---I know myself entirely unequal to it. And, I will engage, that the engraved Plates, with all the Copies of ancient Manuscripts, which have cost me considerably more than Fifty Guineas, shall be at the service of their chosen Historian.---It is to me a pleasing Reflection, that the fortunate accident of my Birth in this County, has greatly contributed to the Ease and Happiness of my Life. And therefore, could my precise Idea of its genuine Glory be realized, I would with pleasure subscribe a Sum of Fifty Guineas more, for this grand and noble Undertaking.

But Grandeur and Nobility always imply expence. And you may firmly assure yourself, that this natural Alliance will not be dissolved in the present Instance of our History of Cheshire.---That the Plan cannot possibly be completed under

T

under two large Volumes in Folio, I am certain ; and, I fear, the ancient Splendour of our native City will disdain to be confined within such narrow limits.---For consider, my dear Friend, that King's Vale-Royal, as it stands at present, makes a moderate sized volume in folio ; though it relates chiefly and principally to Chester. And the History of Bucklow Hundred---though it is only as *one*¹ to seven---makes a volume in folio, nearly of the size of King's. What then must become of our enlarged and copious Treasure of Materials, if we think of executing the Work upon so narrow a system, as what imperfectly describes, only the City of Chester, and one single Hundred of the whole County ?

But these two Volumes in Folio, with the Appendages of their numerous Plates², can by no means be published under the vast expence of 3000 l.--even at the lowest degree of estimation. And if the noble Remains of some of our superb Mansions, our

——— Ilium, et ingens
Gloria CESTRIENSIIUM ——

were to be included, the Expence must greatly exceed this, very enormous, Sum.

But

¹ Cheshire consists of seven Hundreds ; of which, Bucklow-Hundred is not the largest in Extent.

² Viz. Of ancient Castles, Churches, Religious Houses, Monuments, Arms, and Seals ; with Views of all our several local Antiquities.

But you may perhaps ask me--in nearly the language of Pope --

“ Oh say, what Means this vast Expence supply !

“ What Mines to swell this boundless History ?—

I would answer, the generous, and the publick-spirited, Mine of a Subscription.---The particular Quota of each Subscriber, far be it from me to presume to mention. Let the Gentlemen of the County fix any Sum, they please, between the indispenfible Extremes of six and ten Guineas ; and let them send their Names, either to Mr. Bathurst, Bookfeller in Fleet-Street, London ; or to Mr. Lawton, Bookfeller in Chester. When Two HUNDRED have subscribed their Names, it may be time to think of forming an Antiquarian Association, under the Auspices of some chosen Chief, some selected Teucer '---similar to that laudable Society, which was formed by the Encouragement of Sir Thomas Cave, for the History of Northamptonshire.---But whether formed, or not, the Publick, and yourself, may certainly depend upon the faithful Performance of my present Engagements. And perhaps the Execution of some Parts of the Plan, may be nearly coeval with the Existence of the Society ; as no Requisite is wanting, to the final Completion of one whole Hundred, except a regular List of Incumbents ; with a regular History of Property and Families, for the last Fifty Teucro Duce, et Auspice Teucro. HOR.

Years.

Years. To which I must necessarily add; a personal and careful Investigation, of every remarkable local Circumstance, and every memorable Relick of Antiquity, that may be worthy of the Notice, and the Attention of Posterity.

Before I conclude; I have only, my dear Friend, to endeavour to repay the mighty Debt of Gratitude I owe to my BENEFACTORS, by returning them, through your Means, my most sincere and most respectful Acknowledgments for the several Favours they have condescended to shew me. And tho' your Solicitations, contrary to my own express Wishes, have emboldened my *unfledged Pinions*¹ to the first Essay of this daring Flight; yet my obliging Benefactors may possibly trace the Hand, that sends them these respectful Acknowledgements, though it has not the Confidence to subscribe its Name.---The Heart, however, you know you may always command of

Your sincere, faithful, and affectionate of Friends,

A Fellow of the Antiquary Society.

¹ Olim Juventas, et patrius Vigor,
Nido laborum propulit infcium;
Vernique, jam Nimbis remotis,
Insolitos docuere Nisus
Venti Paventem.—

HOR. lib. iv. ode 4.

P O S T S C R I P T.

THOUGH I have now closed this tedious letter ; yet busy Recollection,--and to you I fear an impertinent one,--still urges me to blot more Paper, and to trespass still further upon the Partialities of your Friendship. CHESHIRE, you know, is the Burthen of my Theme !---And, when either the Glories of her Empire, or the Beauties of her sequestred Retreats,¹ at any time strike my Fancy---will you excuse me for endeavouring to fix these Ideas, by cloathing them with Language, and transmitting them to you, tho' perhaps intruding Visitors ? I will hope, however, for your Pardon !---And could I flatter myself with the Hopes, that the Muse of History would not refuse the influence of her Aid, at the Request of the Silvan Nymphs of Wirrall and of Delamere, my Satisfaction would be compleat.

Busy Recollection then, my dear Friend, presents me with a striking Instance of refined Policy in Hugh Lupus
U ---the

“ — — Thy green Retreats,

“ Invite my Lays ! — be present Silvan Maids !

“ Unlock your springs, and open all your Shades ;

“ — — Your Aid, O Muses, bring !”

Pope's Windf. Forest.

Years. To which I must necessarily add; a personal and careful Investigation, of every remarkable local Circumstance, and every memorable Relick of Antiquity, that may be worthy of the Notice, and the Attention of Posterity.

Before I conclude; I have only, my dear Friend, to endeavour to repay the mighty Debt of Gratitude I owe to my BENEFACTORS, by returning them, through your Means, my most sincere and most respectful Acknowledgments for the several Favours they have condescended to shew me. And tho' your Solicitations, contrary to my own express Wishes, have emboldened my *unfledged Pinions*¹ to the first Essay of this daring Flight; yet my obliging Benefactors may possibly trace the Hand, that sends them these respectful Acknowledgements, though it has not the Confidence to subscribe its Name.---The Heart, however, you know you may always command of

Your sincere, faithful, and
affectionate of Friends,

A Fellow of the Antiquary Society.

¹ Olim Juventas, et patrius Vigor,
Nido laborum propulit infcium;
Vernique, jam Nimbis remotis,
Insolitos docuere Nisus
Venti Paventem.—

HOR. lib. iv. ode 4.

P O S T S C R I P T.

THOUGH I have now closed this tedious letter ; yet busy Recollection,--and to you I fear an impertinent one,--still urges me to blot more Paper, and to trespass still further upon the Partialities of your Friendship. CHESHIRE, you know, is the Burthen of my Theme !---And, when either the Glories of her Empire, or the Beauties of her sequestred Retreats,¹ at any time strike my Fancy---will you excuse me for endeavouring to fix these Ideas, by cloathing them with Language, and transmitting them to you, tho' perhaps intruding Visitors ? I will hope, however, for your Pardon !---And could I flatter myself with the Hopes, that the Muse of History would not refuse the influence of her Aid, at the Request of the Silvan Nymphs of Wirrall and of Delamere, my Satisfaction would be compleat.

Busy Recollection then, my dear Friend, presents me with a striking Instance of refined Policy in Hugh Lupus
U ---the

“ — — Thy green Retreats,
“ Invite my Lays! — be present Silvan Maids!
“ Unlock your springs, and open all your Shades;
“ — — Your Aid, O Muses, bring!”

Pope's Windf. Forest.

---the Founder of our local Monarchy---perfectly similar with a Political Institution of the Founder of Imperial Rome. Population, you know, is not barely the Ornament, and the Splendor---it is the positive Basis of every Empire. ROMULUS therefore, in order to furnish his new City with Inhabitants, opened an Asylum for the Fugitives of all Nations. LUPUS did the same. But, as his Territories were much more extensive, than even those of the Empress of the World, in her Days of Infancy---and as they had been greatly depopulated by the Ravages of War---instead of one, he opened three Asyla, for the Umbrage and Protection of any new Subjects, that might take shelter under the cover of his Wings. These three Asyla were, HOOLE-HEATH near Chester, OVER-MARSH near Farndon, and RUD-HEATH near Middlewich. Their Situation was most happily imagined. Two of them near the Confines of Wales---where the Addition of every single Subject added a double Portion of domestic Strength---and the third near the Center of his Dominions. It is not impossible, but the rude and uncultivated State of these extensive Wastes, might influence the Founder of our Empire in his Choice, as well as their happy Situation. But whatever was the Motive of assigning these particular Spots for his several Asyla---it is certain, that the Success of them was equal to his utmost Wishes. The Prince of Roman Historians mentions this sensible Institution of Romulus, as being agreeable to the ancient

ancient Practice of the Founders of all States.¹ But we cannot suppose, that a rough and unpolished NORMAN, whose only Science could be that of War, and whose principal amusements must arise from the very din and clangor of Arms ---could adopt this refinement of policy from any literary Lights, or derive any Intelligence about it from the informing Page of History. Nature, alone, must have been his Guide ; and his Tutorefs, instinctive Reason.

Such was the state of Hugh Lupus's Political Institution ! ---But the History of very remote times becomes so exceedingly confused, when it depends only upon the Evidence of Oral Tradition---that though the Remembrance of the Fact, relative to these Asyla, was perfectly distinct and clear, in the days of our Historical Collector, Webb---yet the Reasons of the Fact were entirely obliterated and defaced from the traces of Human Memory.---Speaking of Twemlowe, in his Vale-Royal, he proceeds thus,--“ And so we passe into that spacious “ Precinct of Rudheath, a wide Common, containing a large “ Circuit,

¹ Deinde, ne vana Urbis Magnitudo esset, adjiciendæ Multitudinis causâ, vetere Consilio condentium Urbes, qui, obscuram atque humilem conciendo ad se Multitudinem, natam è Terrâ sibi Prolem ementiebantur ; Locum, qui nunc leptus descendentibus inter duos lucos est, Asylum aperit. Eò ex finitimis Populis Turba omnis, sine discrimine, liber an servus esset, avida Novarum Rerum per-fugit : idque primum ad cæptam Magnitudinem Roboris fuit.

Liv. Hist. Rom. Lib. i. sect 8.

" Circuit, and which hath in old Time had a Sanctuary in
 " it, with priviledges thereunto ; such, as howsoever in-
 " tended by those Founders, in pity and compassion to poor
 " Offenders : yet in the abuse of them, an encouragement to
 " wilfull and desperate Transgressors ; and therefore justly
 " demolished."---But tho' Webb---depending only upon
 Tradition---knew nothing of the true Origin of this Asylum ; yet that ancient invaluable Record, the Cheshire Domesday in the possession of your Friend', bears indisputable Evidence to the Principles and Reasons, upon which this Political Establishment was first formed. The Verdict of two Inquisitions, delivered by a Jury of the most distinguished Gentlemen of Cheshire---upon the awful Solemnity
 of an Oath---contains the Faith and Testimony of this indisputable Evidence. One of these Inquisitions was taken in the Seventh Year of Edward the Second ; and the other in the Twentieth of Edward the Third. And, if you will give me leave, I will present you with the substance of the two Verdicts.

By an Inquisition, taken before Hugh de Audelith,
 Justice of Chester, on Sunday after the Feast of St. Peter ad
 Vincula, it was found---" That a certain large piece of
 " Waste, called OVERMARSH, was in ancient Times or-
 " dained

2 See Pages 13, 14.

“ dained for Strangers, of what Country soever ; and af-“ signed to such, as came to the Peace of the Earl of Chef-
 “ ter, or to his Aid ; resorting there to form Dwellings,
 “ but without building any fixed Houses, by the means of “ Nails or Pins, save only Booths and Tents to live in.”

The other Inquisition, is as follows---“ The Jury ’ de“ clare upon their Oaths, that the Moor which is called “ RUDHEATH, was formerly a Waste Place, very anciently
 “ assigned and set apart by some of the old Earls of Chester,
 “ for the Reception, not only of their own Subjects, but
 “ of all fugitive Strangers coming to the Aid of the Earl’s
 “ Peace, either from England, or from any other Countries.”
 ---And there is an Inquisition of the same Tenor, relative to the other Asylum of HOOLE-HEATH.

Having thus shewed you, my dear Friend, beyond the possibility of a doubt---that the Principles of Policy, in the Founders of the Roman and the Cestrian states, were as perfectly parallel, as they were perfectly refined---a circumstance
 W surely

* “ Hamo de Massi, Hugo de Venables, Urian de Sancto Petro, Rogerus
 “ de Chedle, Hugo de Dutton, Petrus de Dutton, et Robertus de Pulford, “ Milites ; Johannes de Wettenhale, Willielmus de Boidell, Johannes de Leghe, “ Matthæus de Becheton, David de Egerton, Robertus de Bulkeley, et alii
 “ Juratores.”

Cheshire Domesday, Princip.

“ Circuit, and which hath in old Time had a Sanctuary in
 “ it, with priviledges thereunto ; such, as howsoever in“ tended by those Founders, in pity and compassion to poor “ Offenders : yet in the abuse of them, an encouragement to “ wilfull and desperate Transgressors ; and therefore justly
 “ demolished.”---But tho’ Webb---depending only upon
 Tradition---knew nothing of the true Origin of this Asylum ; yet that ancient invaluable Record, the Cheshire
Domesday in the possession of your Friend’, bears indisputable Evidence to the Principles and Reasons, upon which this Political Establishment was first formed. The Verdict of two Inquisitions, delivered by a Jury of the most distinguished Gentlemen of Cheshire---upon the awful Solemnity
 of an Oath---contains the Faith and Testimony of this indisputable Evidence. One of these Inquisitions was taken in the Seventh Year of Edward the Second ; and the other in the Twentieth of Edward the Third. And, if you will give me leave, I will present you with the substance of the two Verdicts.

By an Inquisition, taken before Hugh de Audelith,
 Justice of Chester, on Sunday after the Feast of St. Peter ad
 Vincula, it was found---“ That a certain large piece of “ Waste, called OVERMARSH, was in ancient Times or“ dained

“ dained for Strangers, of what Country soever ; and as“ signed to such, as came to the Peace of the Earl of Ches“ ter, or to his Aid ; resorting there to form Dwellings,
 “ but without building any fixed Houses, by the means of “ Nails or Pins, save only Booths and Tents to live in.”

The other Inquisition, is as follows---“ The Jury ’ de“ clare upon their Oaths, that the Moor which is called
 “ RUDHEATH, was formerly a Waste Place, very anciently
 “ assigned and set apart by some of the old Earls of Chester,
 “ for the Reception, not only of their own Subjects, but
 “ of all fugitive Strangers coming to the Aid of the Earl’s
 “ Peace, either from England, or from any other Countries.”
 ---And there is an Inquisition of the same Tenor, relative to the other Asylum of HOOLE-HEATH.

Having thus shewed you, my dear Friend, beyond the possibility of a doubt---that the Principles of Policy, in the Founders of the Roman and the Cestrian states, were as perfectly parallel, as they were perfectly refined---a circumstance
 W surely

“ Hamo de Maffi, Hugo de Venables, Urian de Sancto Petro, Rogerus
 “ de Chedle, Hugo de Dutton, Petrus de Dutton, et Robertus de Pulford, “ Milites ; Johannes de Wettenhale, Willielmus de Boidell, Johannes de Leghe,
 “ Matthæus de Becheton, David de Egerton, Robertus de Bulkeley, et alii
 “ Juratores.”

Cheshire Domesday, Princip.

surely the most resplendent for our Native County---I shall take the liberty of troubling you with another illustrious Fact; which is equally founded in Truth, and equally conducive to the Glory of our Palatinate.---That renowned Earl, RANDAL BLUNDEVILLE, reigned the sole monarch of his Dominions, with such an absolute and such a sovereign Power---that he acknowledged no SUPERIOUR; whenever the Behests of his Paramount Lord were contrary to the maxims of sound Policy, or to those dictates of natural Justice, which he thought a wise and a virtuous Prince owed always to a faithful and an obedient people. Of this, there was a remarkable Instance, when that weak Prince Henry the Third issued his Imperial Mandate for the Collection of the Papal Tax--commonly called Peter-pence--through the whole extent of his Dominions. Since our Cestrian Monarch, not only forbid the Collection of it, within the Bounds of his own Territories, but threatened the Collectors with condign Punishment, if they insolently disobeyed his Royal Pleasure. Amongst other Historians, of the most approved Character, who relate this Fact---William Smith, in the Vale-Royal, gives us the following, and by far the best, Account of the Transaction.---“ Randal, or Ranulph, the Third, “ he says, was very well learned, especially in the Laws of the “ Realm; infomuch that he compiled a Book thereof. He “ was also very zealous in Religion. For we read, that “ when

P O S T S C R I P T.

“ when the Pope sent his Collectors throughout Christen“ dom, to gather up his Tenths, he alone refused to pay “ any : Suffering none in his Dominions, either Layman or “ Clerk, to yield any Tenths to the Pope’s Proctors ; al“ though all England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, paid it.”¹

Instances, such as these, of refined Policy, Wisdom, and Puissance, in the Conduct of our local Monarchs ; I fondly imagine, my dear Friend,---though “ I have never dreamt “ upon the summit of Parnassus”---to be Stars, of such Historic Radiance, in the Annals of our Cheshire Empire ; that any Sketch of the Memorials of her ancient Glory must have been defective, if I had endeavoured to have eclipsed their effulgent Splendour, by covering them with the Veil of Obscurity.

But the very Catastrophe of our Glory, is in some measure the Herald of our former Fame. And as no Language can express the final Period of this Glory, in a clearer or more concise manner, than our great Antiquary has related it-- ‘ So take the sad tale of this Catastrophe in nearly the words

¹ Part 1st page 51.

In part 2d page 31 there is this Remark : “ It is not impertinent to set “ down, what the same Author—Henry Bradshaw—writeth in another Place ;
 “ and what Collections out of him I find recorded.” But this Remark is an undoubted Argument, that the Historian of the Vale-Royal, who was almost coeval with Bradshaw, imagined his Collections to be unpublished.

' words of Camden. " RANDAL BLUNDEVILLE, was suc" ceeded by his Nephew, JOHN, surnamed SCOTUS; who " dying without issue, Henry the Third, charmed with
 " the Sight of so fair an Inheritance, annexed it to the " Crown; not being willing that such a VAST ESTATE
 " should be parcelled out amongst DISTAFFS---meaning the " Sisters and Cobereffes of Earl JOHN. But the Kings of " England, when this County devolved to the Crown, main" tained their ancient Palatine Prerogatives, and continued
 " to hold their Courts---as the Kings of France did in the " County of Champaign---that the honour of the Palati-
 " nate might not be extinguished by disuse. An Honour
 " which was ever afterwards conferred upon the King's " eldest Son; and, in the first Instance, upon EDWARD,
 " Heir apparent of this very Henry. But when this martial
 " Prince had unhappily been taken Prisoner in the Battle of " Lewes, he was obliged to regain his Liberty, by plucking this
 " inestimable Jewel out of his Princely Diadem, and resigning
 " it to the Victorious Baron, Simon Montfort, Earl of Lei" cester; as the valuable Reward, and indeed the only
 ' adequate Purchase, of his Ransom. '

' Simon Montfort being soon afterwards slain in the Battle of Evesham, the Palatinate reverted to the Crown: and Richard the Second, by a solemn Act of the whole legislature, erected it into a Principality, as a splendid augmentation of his royal Titles; styling himself, PRINCEPS CESTRIÆ. His Successor, Henry the Fourth, repealed this Act, and restored those Palatine-Prerogatives which it enjoys to this Day.

Camden's Brit. vol. i. page 682.

After these Historic Anecdotes, I shall trespass no longer upon your Friendship, than merely to explain the Origin of the Minstrel-Jurisdiction, which I only barely hinted at, under the superb Mansion,¹ and Family of Dutton. And I shall then finally close the Tedium of your Perusal, and of this Postscript, by presenting you with a summary View of all the Manuscripts in my possession, towards a new, and I should hope, a not entirely undeserving, History of our distinguished County.

Amongst the Military Atchievements of the renowned Earl Randal--his Heroic Enterprises against Llewellyn, Prince of Wales, were not the least Instances of his undaunted Prowess. But being one day surprised, and surrounded in his Castle of Rothlent in Flintshire, by a Force infinitely superiour to his own; he sent Expresses, with the utmost privacy, to his great General, Roger Lacy,² earnestly desiring his immediate Relief in this exigence of danger. These Expresses found Lacy at Chester, during the Anniversary of the Midsummer Fair. And, as the occasion

¹ The Mansion and Lordship of Dutton, are now the property of Mrs. Bullock, wife of John Bullock, Esq. of Falkborne-Hall, and Representative of the Borough of Maldon, in Essex.

² Roger Lacy was CONSTABLE of Chester. The duty of this high Officer, was to command the Vanguard of the Earl's Army; and to be the Foremost in every Post of Danger.

was critically urgent, from the imminent peril of the Earl's Life; this General immediately marched with a tumultuous Croud of Players, Fiddlers, and Musicians, and all the Persons he could possibly assemble--of whom great numbers had been tempted to Chester, by the celebration of this festal Anniversary. Llewellyn, alarmed at the approach of this vast Multitude, raised the Siege with the utmost Precipitation. And, after Earl RANDALL's return in Triumph, the Effusions of his Gratitude formed his first Acts of Sovereignty; by rewarding LACY, with an exclusive Prerogative over those particular Trades and Mysteries, which had been exercised by these fortunate, and signal Instruments of his Royal Preservation. The CONSTABLE's Son, John Lacy, reserved his exclusive Privilege over some of those Mechanic Occupations; but granted the Minstrel-Prerogative to HUGH DUTTON of DUTTON, and his Heirs: the Son of that RALFE DUTTON, who is supposed to have particularly marched at the Head of the Band of Minstrels. Thus consigning the Rule and Jurisdiction over this Musical Profession to that Family, whose Ancestor had so valiantly commanded them, in the capacity of a Body of Victorious Soldiers.¹

Let

¹ When the Earl's Triumphal Cavalcade made their Public Entry into Chester, after the Dispersion of Llewellyn and his Britons; it is not improbable, that—like

Let me now present you with a summary View of those Cheshire Manuscripts, which are either at present in my Possession, or of which I have been favoured with the obliging Promise.---The Latter are printed in Italics.

	Page
The Cheshire Domesday, peculiarly so called ---	13
The most Material Parts of the Chester Annals --	15
Ditto of the History of the Earldom of Chester ---	16
Several Extracts from Bradshaw's Life of St. Werburgh	17
A very improved and authentic Copy of the Vale Royal	27
A Transcript of Laurence Bostoke's Collections ---	29
Ditto of Sampson Erdeswicke's --- ---	30
Ditto of Ralfe Starkie, the Antiquary --- ---	34
Heraldical Visitation of Ralfe Starkie, Merchant --	36
Heraldical History of Roger Wilcoxon ; another ditto	37
Very Material Parts of the Holmes's Collections --	38
Dr. Williamson's Compend of these Collections ---	39
Bishop Gastrel's of Ditto, in a large Folio Volume ---	40
Transcript of Bishop Stratford's Letters --- ---	41
Ditto of Catherall's Collections. --- ---	41

Transcript

like the Return of Saul after the Slaughter of the Philistines—his Victorious “ Minstrels played before him, with Tabrets, and with Joy, and with all their “ Instruments of Music.” But whether they did or no, thus much is indisputably certain ; that the Musicians always played upon their Instruments of Minstrelsy, before the Earl of Chester's Representative, the LORD OF DUTTON, in their Procession to St. John's Church, at the Midsummer Anniversary.

	Page
Transcript of Mr. Vernon's -- -- -- --	42
Sir William Brereton's Letters and Tranfactions in 5 Folio Volumes -- -- -- -- --	43
Mr. Booth of Twemlowe's Collections -- -- --	44
Ashmole's Drawings of a Variety of Antiquarian Re- mains -- -- -- -- --	45
Sir Peter Leycester's Collections, in 20 Volumes --	54
Mr. Wilbraham's, for the District of Namptwich --	54
Rev. Mr. Stones's, in 3 Volumes -- -- --	58
Mr. Warburton's, Somerset Herald, in 4 Volumes --	59
Mr. Carrington's -- -- -- -- --	60
Dr. Gower's -- -- -- -- --	61
The late Recorder's of the City of Chester -- --	62
Liber Petri Dutton, armigeri -- -- --	67
Ledger Book of Vale-Royal Abbey -- -- --	68

The following Manuscripts have not been mentioned in the preceding Sketch of Materials; because the Authours, and the Collectors of them, were equally unknown. But I am sufficiently happy, either in the Promise, or the Possession of them.

1 A large Folio of 631 pages, containing a variety of very curious Miscellaneous Observations, relative to the County and City of Chester; digested alphabetically.

2 Another

2 Another Volume in Folio, containing the Inquisitiones post mortem, from the 33d year of Edward the Third to the 24th of Henry the Seventh.---Both which have been communicated to me through the extreme kindness of Mr. Lowe, of Christleton.

3 A Fædary in Folio of all the Tenures in Capite, during the Reign of Philip and Mary; transmitted to me by the Rev. Mr. Price, Bodley-Librarian, with that communicative zeal, which is peculiar to the literary friend of every intended publication.

4 Another Volume in Folio, of the most ancient and famous City of Chester.

5, 6 Two Quarto Volumes, treating of Chester; sent to me in the most obliging manner by Mr. Speed, Deputy Register.---One of them is arranged under 38 Chapters.

7 Another Volume in Quarto, upon the same Subject.---This too was transmitted through the Favor of the Rev. Mr. Price, Bodley-Librarian.

8 A thin Quarto Volume, on the Siege of Chester, communicated through the very friendly civility of the Rev. Mr. Harwood.

9 A curious Treatise in Quarto, inscribed Liber B, containing many valuable Materials ; and entrusted to me with the greatest Instances of Benevolence and Regard, by the Rev. Mr. Allen, Rector of Torporley.

10 A fair Manuscript in Octavo, of 200 pages, principally relating to the City of Chester ; but including a variety of Miscellaneous Remarks---very kindly and obligingly sent to me by Miss Tilston of Chester.

11 Several Manuscripts in the Possession of Mr. Orme of Chester ; which he has genteely promised me the Use of.

12 A Transcript, in a large Folio Volume, of Miscellaneous Articles, under the following Titles.

The Family and Descent of Hugh Earl of Chester.

The Acts of the Seven Earls of Chester.

Extracts from the Chronicles of Roger of Chester.

Extracts from the Chronicles of the Abbey of St. Werburgh.

Of the Holy Virgin St. Werburgh.

Extracts from the Chronicles of the Ecclesiastical History of Chester, brought down from the earliest Times to the year 1410, by John Rochford.

Mr. Allen has favoured me with a still more valuable Manuscript ; which has been commemorated in the preceding Sketch.

Some

Some Historical Accounts of the Abbey of Stanlaw, founded by John Lacy, Constable of Chester, and Baron of Halton, A. D. 1172; with a Catalogue of the Abbots.

Some Particulars of the Abbey of Stanlaw, and of the Family of the Laceys, the Founders of it.

Of the Genealogy of the Founders of the Abbey of Stanlaw.

A Chronicle of the Abbey of Stanlaw.

The Charter of the Abbey of Pulton 1153.

The Charter of Roger, Constable of Chester, to the Priory of Norton.

The Pedigrees of the Families of Bostoke and Egerton in Cheshire.

13 Another Transcript in Folio, containing Charters of Confirmation, of the Dignity of Earl of Chester, to the King's eldest Son, in the following Instances --- Edward, the Black Prince, Son of Edward the Third --- Prince Edward, Son of Henry the Sixth --- Prince Arthur, Son of Henry the Seventh --- with a particular Account, in what manner the usual MISE of 3000 Marks was raised by the

“ MISES, are also those Offerings, which the Subjects of the Palatinate of “ Chester make to every Earl, at his Accession, for the Enjoyment of their an“ cient Immunities. As an instance, we have been informed, that the Mise paid
“ to Charles the First, when he was created Earl of Chester, was about 2000 l.”

Spelman's Glossary.

He was the last Earl, who was advanced to this High Dignity, with all the Ceremonial of a pompous Investiture,

Palatinate;

Palatinate^r, as a kind of free Gift from the Subjects to their Prince, upon his actual Investiture with the Dignity of this Earldom. — In this Volume is an old Map of Cheshire, printed about the year 1579, and elegantly coloured; on the sides of which, are several curious Memorandums, with the Names of all the Justices of the Peace at that time in the County.

14 CESTRIA ILLUSTRATA; or, The Armorial Bearings of every individual Gentleman in the County of Chester; taken about the Year 1730.

15 A Transcript of many Cheshire Particulars from the COUCHIR-BOOKS of the Dutchy of Lancaster; more especially from Tom. i. inscribed Comitatus Cestriæ.

16 Several CHESHIRE Manuscripts, in the Hand Writing of that great Antiquary Sir WILLIAM DUGDALE, now in the Library of the very ancient and distinguished Family of the MAINWARINGS of Peover; descendants, by the Female Line, from HUGH CYVELIOC, the fifth Earl of Chester. Which, the present Baronet, Sir HENRY MAINWARING, has

¹ As the Original MISE-BOOK is supposed to be lost, the Recovery of it certainly becomes a Part of our Historic-Desiderata. And I have the Pleasure of informing you, that there is an authentic Copy of this ancient MISE-BOOK amongst the Manuscripts of Sir Peter Leycester.

offered

offered me the liberal Use of, as well as of his whole Collection, in a manner the most polite, and the most engaging that is possible. *

17 Under similar circumstances, with the preceding article, is the following---Some Delineations of ancient Cestrian Remains, by the elegant Draughtsman of my esteemed Friend, THOMAS PENNANT, Esq. of Downing in Flintshire; the sensible and ingenious Author of BRITISH ZOOLOGY.

18 Upon this Head of Delineations, may it not be too much of the Egotist, to add?--Several hundred Drawings of, curious Seals, Coats of Arms, and Antiquarian Remains, copied---from very ancient and authentic Draughts still existing---by an ingenious Artist under my own Inspection.

Such, my dear Friend, is a Summary View of the enlarged, and copious Treasure of Materials for a History of Cheshire.---As a mere CATALOGUE, it must at least have fatigued, if not disgusted, you, by that dull Repetition, which is inseparable from every methodical Arrangement. With your obliging Permission, then, shall I endeavour to relieve, and if possible, to charm away these disagreeable sensations, by presenting you with one Quotation more from the celebrated and much-admired Poet? Whose general Boundaries of our illustrious County, in his picturesque and beautifully descriptive Manner, may at the same time perhaps be neither an improper, nor an unpleasing, Conclusion of this imperfect Sketch---

* This most agreeable piece of intelligence was received, during the time these sheets were in the Press.

THE GENERAL BOUNDARIES OF CHESHIRE;

IN THE DESCRIPTIVE POESY OF MICHAEL DRAYTON.

“ Oh! Thou thrice-happy Shire, confined so to be “ ’Twixt two, such famous Floods, as MERSEY is, and DEE.
 “ Thy DEE, upon the West, from WALES doth thee divide;
 “ Thy MERSEY, on the North, from the LANCASTRIAN Side,
 “ And tow’rds the DERBYAN PEAKE and MORELANDS—which do draw
 “ More mountainous and wild—the high crown’d SHUTTINGS-LAW
 “ And MOLECOP are thy Mounds; with those proud Hills, whence rove
 “ The lovely Sister Brooks, the Silv’ry Dane and Dove.
 “ Clear Dove, that makes to Trent; the other to the West:
 “ But, in that famous Town most happy, of the Rest,
 “ From which thou tak’st thy Name—Fair CHESTER! call’d of old “ CAER-LEGION—whilst, proud Rome her Conquests here did hold,
 “ Of those, her LEGIONS known, the Faithful Station then;
 “ So stoutly held to tack, by the near North-Wales Men.
 “ Yet, by her own right Name, she’d rather called be,
 “ As her the Britons term’d, the FORTRESS UPON DEE.—
 “ Or—vainly she may seem a MIRACLE to stand,
 “ Th’ imaginary work of some huge Giant’s hand.

Poly-Olb. Song XI. Line 33, et seq.

September 3, 1771

• The present chief Magistrate of this ancient City, is Mr. Lawton; who kindly superintends the Sale and Dispersion of this Letter.

